Missing Three Days

3 Boys Rescued From Coal Mine

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Three teen-age boys, crawling some 2,000 feet to safety, were rescued from an old abandoned coal mine Saturday after being missing since Thursday.

The boys were rushed to St. Clair Memorial Hospital where the father of one said:

"They all looked bad—drawn, worn out and dirty. But they're in good shape."

Robert Abbott, 15; Danny O'Kain, 13, and Billy Burke, 13, were led out of the mine within 2½ hours after they were discovered.

A hospital spokesman said Abbott and O'Kain were in good condition while Burke was satisfactory. All were admitted for observation. The spokesman said Burke's chest would be X rayed to determine if he was sick or injured.

Inspector Everett Turner of the U.S. Bureau of Mines credited the discovery of a firecracker with leading rescuers to the boys in the mine containing lethal black damp gas.

"About two hours before we found them," Turner told a newsman, "we had indications they were in the mine. Jennings Breedon and Jim Hutchens found a firecracker. They reported to me and I went on in."

The inspectors crawled and dragged themselves some 2,000 feet to the boys, then had breathing apparatus brought to the trio.

Abbott told newsmen at the hospital their flashlights went out about five minutes after they entered the mine Thursday.

"It was dark in there," he said, "but we had light most of the while. We kept recharging the batteries. "We were scared and nervous. We seemed to get further and further from the entrance."

Asked what had happened, Abbott said:

"We made the wrong turn. We got lost."

"Billy hurt his back," O'Kain said. "He said he couldn't move. That's why he sat down."

Billy's mother, Mrs. Florence Burker, said her son was "real scared."

Turner and Hutchens reached the boys after three days of exhausting searching in the mine in suburban Castle Shannon.

Before the discovery of the firecracker, officials felt the boys were not in the mine although the families of the three steadfastly believed they were in there.

The search had to be suspended several times because of the black damp gas. Turner said rescuers actually came within 800 feet of the boys Thursday night but were forced back by the gas.

O'Kain explained that they had been in the mine before—"just a couple of days ago. I know I'll never go back."

Abbott said they never heard the rescuers until they were found. He said the time dragged, and they thought Saturday was Sunday.

MOTHER AT MINE WHERE BOYS WERE MISSING — Mrs. Florence Burke, mother of one of three boys believed lost in an abandoned coal mine near Pittsburgh, Pa., takes the family dog to the mine entrance, July 13. Searchers tried to enlist the aid of the dog to find the boys, but the animal refused to enter the mine. The boys were later found alive in the cave. (AP Wirephoto)

Hope to Learn If Red Is Ready for Ties With West

Chance for Complete Split in Red Camp Seen

The situation now developing is potentially one of the most important to arise in the cold war in several years. It could lead into a complete and final split between Moscow and Peking. And it could begin a new period of easier relations between Russia and the West.

Western experts are not betting firmly on this outcome yet. Russia might break with Red China without becoming particularly friendly with the United States. The present Moscow-Peking quarrel could conceivably be patched up, although the best informed Westerners think it has already passed the point of no return.

But the possibilities of change are considered great.

What is a fact at the moment is that peace talks between Soviet and Chinese delegations, which began here eight days ago, are failing. This was disclosed by Red China in a newspaper blast at Russia Saturday. In the official People's Daily, Red China asked whether, since Russia would not come to terms in the peace conference, it was trying to push Chinese-Soviet relations to the brink of rupture.

At the same time, the United States and Britain were holding preliminary strategy talks in London in preparation for the conference, officially on a nuclear test ban treaty.

The London talks were conducted by Undersecretary of State W. Averell Harriman, a veteran of negotiations with the Russians going back 20 years, and by Lord Hailsham, Britain's science minister.

Harriman flew to London early in order to coordinate the U.S.-British approach to the negotiations. The three-power meeting is expected to last 10 days or two weeks. Harriman and Hailsham are due here Sunday.

Moscow insisted that the talks be secret and the United States and Britain bowed to the pressure. How long the secrecy cloak will hold is a guess.

'63 Legislature Ends on Monday

JEFFERSON CITY (AP)—The 1963 legislative session will just disappear into the limbo at midnight Monday—under the constitutional requirement that it go out of session July 15.

That means all bills passed by both Houses and signed by the governor—unless they had emergency clauses or are appropriations — will become effective a second after midnight Oct. 12.

Included will be an increase in the sales-use tax from the present two cents on the dollar to three cents.

Some House members thought it would provide a fine show of power to adjourn sine die Saturday. That way all the plans for the effective date of major bills Oct. 13 would be thrown away. Had the Legislature adjourned finally two days early it would have meant the bills would have become effective Oct. 11.

Lots of explanatory regulations and pamphlets already have been printed and distributed, explaining such things as the boost in the sales tax.

But wiser heads prevailed and both houses adopted resolutions adjourning at midnight Monday.

The Senate held only a technical session, so some 34 bills could be signed and the adjournment resolution adopted. There were only 15 of the 34 senators on hand.

But the House held a gala.

Last June 26 the House members voted on who they thought were the best legislators from each political party—the most effective, the most effective freshmen members and the most effective in debate.

They bestowed engraved silver bowls on Reps. Paul M. Berra, D-St. Louis; R. J. (Bus) King, R-St. Louis County; H. F. Patterson, D-Boone County; Alfred Speer, R-St. Louis County; Mel Carnahan, D-Phelps County, and Jerry Harkins Jr., R-Jackson County.

Then in a spirit of camaraderie not always noticeable during the six-month session, the members gave presents to the officers of the House and of both parties.

A handsome portable television set went to Speaker Thomas D. Graham, D-Cole County, who said he was speechless.

Says Tax Cut Would Be Better

For Negroes Than Any New Civil Rights Legislation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. George A. Smathers, D-Fla., said Saturday that a tax cut that would spur the economy would be more beneficial to Negroes than congressional passage of civil rights legislation.

Smathers, a member of the Senate Finance Committee and a close personal friend of President Kennedy, said on a taped television-radio program he will filibuster against the administration's civil rights proposals although he could support five out of seven of them.

But he said it would be tragic if this controversy prevents Congress from acting on a tax reduction.

The House Ways and Means Committee has not yet completed action on such a measure. The Senate Finance Committee will not begin hearings until after the House has passed a bill. These hearings could be halted by a Senate filibuster.

Smathers acknowledged that the expected Southern filibuster will fail unless the Dixie group gets some Republican help.

Another prospective Southern filibusterer, Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., said in a statement he might offer a proposal calling for a national referendum on the President's civil rights proposal. He conceded, however, "I don't think there is much chance of getting it."

Long struck particularly at the proposed withholding of federal funds from states discriminating against Negroes and at the proposed granting to Negroes of equal access to privately operated business.

Soviets Level Blast At Chinese

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Communist party declared Sunday the Russian and Chinese views on war and peace remain diametrically opposed. The Russians charged that Chinese representatives are aggravating Soviet-Chinese differences at their current peace talks in Moscow.

In a sweeping indictment of Red China's policies in Communist and world affairs, the Soviet party also accused Peking of trying to worsen U.S.-Soviet relations and heat up the cold war.

The Russians stopped short however, of an open break with the Chinese, indicating the Kremlin would wait for Red China to make any such move.

"The immediate future," the Soviet statement declared, "will show if the Chinese comrades agree to build our relations on the basis of what unites and not disunites us."

Red China declared Saturday it did not want a break with Moscow, and held open the door for a resumption of talks if the present ones fail.

The Soviet party Central Committee berated the Communist Chinese leadership in a 35,000-word open letter addressed to "all the Communist parties" of the world. It was published in Sunday's issue of the Soviet party newspaper Pravda.

The statement was issued a few hours after deputy premier Anastas I. Mikoyan, often the Kremlin's chief troubleshooter, took a hand in the faltering talks.

Mikoyan's role in Saturday's session was not known, but there was speculation he might have been seeking a face-saving way to break off the talks with the Chinese before the Russians sit down Monday with U.S. and British representatives to discuss a nuclear test-ban treaty.

Red China meanwhile accused the United States of making every effort to disrupt the Soviet-Chinese talks and said Washington is counting on a Moscow-Peking split.

Negroes Plan On Resuming Their March

CAMBRIDGE, Md. (AP)—Negro leaders, defying the National Guard's ban on demonstrations, served notice Saturday night they will resume street marches Monday in an effort to break down racial barriers.

"Our people are restless. They want their freedom and they are determined to acquire those legitimate rights which have been too long denied them," said a statement issued by the Cambridge Nonviolent Action Committee.

The committee is headed by Mrs. Gloria Richardson, militant integrationist leader.

What will happen when the National Guard confronts the demonstrators remains to be seen. Friday night about 250 marchers dispersed when Brig. Gen. George M. Gelson quietly notified them they would be violating militia law, invoked by Gov. J. Millard Tawes.

There were indications that Monday's demonstration might be a repeat performance of this, but that the integrationists would later press their drive in such a way that the Guard officers might feel impelled to arrest them.

There were indications that Monday's demonstration might be a repeat performance of this, but that the integrationists would later press their drive in such a way that the Guard officers might feel impelled to arrest them.

Their statement Saturday night praised the Guard for its "impartial" handling of the tense situation, but accused Gov. Tawes of "inaction and lack of positive leadership."

$23,000 Since 1960

Urban Plan Bonds Drawing Interest

With an average of nearly $8,000 annual return on Highway Urban Plan money invested since the bonds were sold in 1960, more than $23,000 has been collected and placed in the Urban Plan sinking and interest fund.

According to figures on record at the office of the Sedalia City Clerk, a total of $23,393.73 in interest on investments of Urban Plan money, plus $84,634.39 collected from the tax levy, placed the total income for the sinking and interest fund to $108,128.12.

From this total sinking and interest fund, $38,759.55 has been expended for interest and principal on the original $350,000 in bonds sold in 1960, leaving the sinking and interest fund at a total of $69,258.57 as of the end of the city's fiscal year, May 31.

The city made its first payment on principal, $5,000, in March. The city, according to the Urban Plan bond payment schedule, will be required to pay off the bonds at a rate of $5,000 per year on principal until March, 1968, when the annual payment will leap to $65,000 and continue at this figure until the final payment is made in 1972.

The annual interest rate began at approximately $12,000 per year, and will decrease progressively, according to the unpaid bonds on hand, year by year until the bonds are paid off.

From the original $350,000 bond issue, $97,148.89 was paid out for the city's 50 per cent share of the costs of rights of way for Highway 65, or Limit Avenue, from Ninth to the north city limits of Sedalia. This includes the city's share of $36,250 on deposit to take care of the Chipman rights-of-way case not yet concluded.

A total of $97,500 was placed on deposit to be used in the rights-of-way purchase, and the remaining $351.11 was returned to the bank as cash.

The Urban Plan fund as it stood May 31, includes the $351.11 cash in the bank, $252,500 in certificates of deposit for a total of $252,851.11 available. The expenditure of $97,148.89 accounts for the total $350,000.

During the past three years part of the Urban Plan bond money was invested for a short time in Savings Bonds, but for the major portion of the time has been invested in certificates of deposit locally, at three per cent interest.

As the city must pay out some $17,000 annually for interest and principal until 1968, a tax levy must be made to make up the difference between the approximately $8,000 in interest earned and the $17,000 owed annually.

If a big jump in the tax levy is to be prevented in 1968, when the $65,000 annual payment becomes effective, some provision to build up the sinking and interest reserve fund to pay off principal and interest between 1968 and 1972 may be made.

When the bond election was held in 1959, voters were assured that a thorough study of Sedalia's tax structure and bonded indebtedness was made by a bonding firm that has handled other bond issues for Sedalia, and that the tax levy to pay the interest and principal on the Urban Plan bonds would never exceed five

Tax Law Machinery Starts Again

WASHINGTON (AP)—The off-again, on-again machinery Congress uses to write tax legislation starts up again Monday.

If the House Ways and Means Committee keeps it turning, the rest of Congress—and the taxpayers—may get a look in about two weeks at the kind of tax cut the legislators will be asked to vote on somewhat later.

Committee leaders are close mouthed. Accordingly a multibillion-dollar guessing game is in full swing on Capitol Hill. For those who want to play, here are some materials:

President Kennedy set for Congress the target of a tax reduction amounting ultimately to somewhat more than $10 billion annually, to be reached in three steps.

There is reason to believe the committee is aiming at a generally similar figure, perhaps a bit lower and with more of the cut coming sooner. In any case, it is expected to propose some reduction effective Jan. 1, 1964.

But the congressional tax writers already have shown plainly they do not intend to follow the executive blueprint in detail.

Kennedy proposed a deep cut in rates. Instead of the present 20-to-91-per-cent range on individual incomes, he suggested 14-to-65 percent, and instead of 52 per cent on corporations 47 per cent. This would have meant reducing revenues by about $13.5 billion. But he proposed also tax revisions—called by some advocates "reforms"—that would have recouped more than $3 billion of the revenue.

Dies After Bicycle Is Struck by Car

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — Robert Parrish, 29, died Saturday of injuries suffered Tuesday night on M266 about two miles west of Springfield.

Parrish was found Wednesday about 4 a.m. in a ditch alongside the highway. The bicycle he had been riding had apparently been hit by a car.

Edwin Gene Johnson, 29, of Springfield surrendered to a Greene County deputy sheriff early Wednesday and was charged with leaving the scene of an accident. Johnson told Deputy Sheriff Ray McNabb he didn't remember hitting anyone, but thought he "might have heard a scream or somethinv."

Budget May Reflect Changes

In U.S. Weapons And Over-All Defense Program

WASHINGTON (AP)—The military budget for the next fiscal year, now under preparation in the Pentagon, may begin to reflect some of the expected major changes in weapons and the overall defense program.

Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara told a news conference last week "I think in some areas we must continue to increase" but added he believes the size of defense budgets will level off or perhaps decline in subsequent years.

This presumably means that McNamara intends to provide for possible boosts in some weapons systems development or production programs by trimming in other programs and by his cost-reduction program.

He insists that no reduction in over-all combat power of the U.S. military is contemplated, that the firepower of strategic and tactical forces will be maintained at high level.

McNamara now is beginning to receive from the services and from his own office proposed changes in the five-year program which is revised annually as each yearly budget is submitted.

In his news conference, McNamara did not specify the areas of the military budget in which he thinks there must be increases. But some of them are being suggested in requests by the armed forces, in testimony given for the current fiscal 1964 budget and by general trends in technology and weaponry.

One proposal being handed McNamara comes from the North American Air Defense Command, for a new design of interceptor capable of intercepting or inspecting future airliners—or bombers—which would fly faster than most interceptor planes in the present Air Force or Navy inventory.

U.S. and Canada Work Out Key Points For Nuclear Weapons Deal

HYANNIS PORT, Mass. (AP) —The United States and Canada have worked out most of the details of a nuclear weapons deal which was a key item in talks he last May between President Kennedy and Canadian Prime Minister Lester Pearson.

The bilateral agreement, it was learned Saturday, will be announced—probably with a month —in an exchange of notes between the two governments.

An agreement in principle that Canada would accept American-made nuclear warheads for continental defense missiles was a major accomplishment of the Kennedy-Macmillan talks at this Cape Cod resort community two months ago.

It came on the heels of a Canadian election campaign in which a major issue was the refusal of Pearson's predecessor, John Diefenbaker, to accept the nuclear explosives despite an earlier agreement to do so. Pearson topped Diefenbaker in the balloting.

Police said the truck driver, Gene J. Deruntz, 36, of Granite City, Ill., apparently applied his brakes on a downhill grade, the truck jackknifed and the Freiert car hit the trailer.

Will Go Before Council

Regulation Manual Is Read to Police

Sedalia police officers Saturday morning were read an 18-page rules and regulations manual to be used in the administration of the Police Department under the recently approved merit system.

The meeting, held in the City Council Chambers, had been called last week by Officer Charles Knapp, head of the Police Officers Association. Twenty-two policemen attended and members of the auxiliary police force were on duty while some 6 a.m. to 2 p.m. shift officers were at the meeting.

Covered in the manual are regulations for personal conduct standards, discharge of duty, court and legal matters, rewards and solicitations procedures, uniform regulations, use and care of vehicles and equipment, leaves, advancement and resignation and duties of district patrolmen.

Knapp read the manual aloud and two members of the Police Personnel Board were on hand to reply to inquiries. They were the Rev. Roland Cooper, chairman of the board, and William F. Brown.

The police rules and regulations manual is scheduled to be presented to City Council Monday night when the Police Personnel Board's recommendations concerning the merit system are also submitted.

Cooper pointed out to the officers the manual as read Saturday was not necessarily its final form as some revisions may yet be made. The purpose of the meeting

E. C. House Relates

Attitude of Citizens As Key to Town's Growth

E. C. House, Kansas City, who for many years has been in the field of studying the character and personality of people and their effect, good or bad, on their communities and society as a whole, was the speaker at the dinner meeting of the Business and Professional Women's Club Thursday evening at Bothwell Hotel.

Choosing for his subject "Community Building," he said it doesn't matter how wonderful the facilities a town might be, the most important factor a community can have is the individual citizens and the impression they make on others. Promising towns have died and small and struggling towns have succeeded just through the attitude of their citizens. They can make or ruin a community.

The improvement of the human faculties, House stated, is a necessity and no matter who they are, every person can improve themselves.

Character, he continued, is the most vital faculty, and he told of his work in analyzing persons in prisons and various institutions. There, he said, he found people of great intelligence, genius, skill, but they lacked the greatest human faculty—character, and sooner or later people without character cost everybody.

But, he went on to say, don't think that being good is all that is necessary; sometimes people are so saintly they don't do anything.

The second faculty is personality, which reveals what you think. Personality, he said, is the human faculty in action. It is that something that inspires people.

In illustrating this he told of a woman in a store where he went, who sized up the customer who walked in the door and then went to her. "I have something that is just right for you," and she took over to show her a dress that she felt would enhance the woman's looks.

When House asked the manager of the store about the saleswoman he knew immediately whom he was talking about, and said that the woman came to him after her husband died and said that she wanted a job. She had worked before her marriage as a stenographer and other jobs but she told the manager, "I want a job where I can help women look their best."

In the day when people seeking employment start out with questions about the pay and the benefits they will receive, the manager thought it was refreshing to find someone who wanted a job so she could do something for other people, and he hired her.

Personality is doing for other people, House pointed out, you don't improve when you think selfishly.

Third, he said, is self confidence, and that doesn't mean egotism. It is a positive mental attitude. When you try to tell people what they should do to better their community it is the wrong attitude when they say, "I agre, but our people wouldn't go along." Yo don't go far on a negative attitude.

Courtesy and tact cost less than anything else, and this he illustrated with a bank president who had just completed remodeling the bank building at great expense to make it as modern as he could possible make it.

When it was complete he called a meeting of his employees and told them that they could demolish that building completely and he could rebuild it but he could never pay for the damage they could do by being indifferent to his customers.

Keep in mind, House said, the significance of cooperation and never do anything without a motive. He explained that the Mayo brothers of the famous Mayo Clinic had a motive, but it wasn't money. They wanted the satisfaction of doing for others.

The sin of ingratitude is prevalent in this country everywhere, House told the group. We take everything for granted. We are not thankful to God, to our forefathers, to anybody. We accept all the wonderful things we have and complain because we don't get more, and the children of today are growing up just like that. That is the way people are doing in communities; they take things without gratitude that have come through the sacrifice of others.

"What has the Chamber of Commerce done for me?" they ask.

Industry, the right kind of industry, the speaker said, those that are not expecting free handouts, are looking at communities to see what kind of people their industrial families will be living with, for they want them to be happy. Any time anyone takes the attitude that they are too little to affect other people, they are wrong, and individuals never get too big to be little either.

Individuals should never be too busy to help their community build, he said, for the workman who is too busy to sharpen his tools is slipping.

The speaker was introduced by Mrs. Marguerite Scott, chairman of the program coordination committee.

Mrs. Sue Keim, president, presided over the meeting and invocation was by Mrs. Dorothy Huddleston. Miss Blanche Faust, music chairman, led the singing, with Mrs. Betty Yeager at the piano.

Captain Marjorie Weber sang a solo, "America, the Beautiful."

Mrs. Sue Keim and Mrs. Vivian Warren were elected delegates to the national convention of the BPWC held in Dallas, Texas, starting July 14, and Mrs. Marguerite Scott and Mrs. Bertha Welch were elected alternates.

Miss Sue Heckart was initiated into the club by Captain Weber, membership chairman.

Guests were introduced by Mrs. Vivian Warren as follows: Mrs. C. B. Harris, Miss Janet Vavra, Mrs. John Streit, Miss Katy Malone, F. M. Winzenried, Mrs. Frances Nash, Mrs. Lottie Freitag and Mrs. Donna Wilson.

The tables were beautifully decorated in red, white and blue with bubble candles in blue and red, and a flower arrangement on the speaker's table of red, white and blue carnatians and snapdragons. Tiny bells designating "Let Freedom Ring" were on red, white and blue ribbons.

Hostesses for the evening were Mrs. Mildred Bowman, Mrs. Jessie Goist and Mrs. Vivian Warren.

4-H Horse Shows

Walk! Trot! Canter! Whoa! Line Up! These and other horsemanship terms will be heard in many Missouri counties this summer, as 4-H Horse Shows designed as educational and recreational events take the spotlight.

Horsemanship is one of the fastest growing 4-H projects in the state with more than 2500 boys and girls enrolled this year. 4-H Horse Shows in many counties are the result of this interest. In fact, District 4-H Horse Shows are being held at Springfield and Mexico for the first time this year. These shows are held in connection with established official District 4-H Shows.

All 4-H Horse Shows in Missouri are held within a framework of eligibility regulations and general rules established by the State 4-H Horsemanship Advisory Committee. This committee will annually evaluate 4-H Horsemanship activities with the purpose of giving guidance and direction to such activities so that they will contribute to the development of the boys and girls enrolled. The 4-H Horsemanship project is designed to place emphasis on the development of the boys and girls. 4- Horse Shows are a tool to help accomplish this.

Objectives established for 4-H Horse Shows in Missouri are as follows:

1. Develop leadership, initiative, self-reliance, sportsmanship and other desirable character traits.

2. Have fun and enjoy recreation by riding and showing horses.

3. Learn skill in horsemanship.

4. Achieve a knowledge of breeding, feeding, training, and management of horses.

5. Develop an ability to judge horses.

6. Increase awareness of safety precautions to prevent injury to themselves, others and their mounts.

Eligibility regulations pertaining to the 4-H members are as follows:

1. Each participant must be currently enrolled in the 4-H Horsemanship project and be in good standing within his local club.

2. Each contestant must have passed his or her ninth birthday and not have passed his or her 21st birthday before Jan. 1 of the current year.

3. Exhibitors must own and/or manage all horses shown. Management is defined as the animal being under the complete care of the 4-H member for the time they are enrolled in the project.

Pros And Cons

Should We Try All Out To Beat Russia to the Moon?

EDITOR'S NOTE — You can find intelligent men on both sides of this question: Should the United States go full steam ahead in trying to get a man to the moon before the Russians do? Here are pros and cons.

By JOHN BARBOUR
Associated Press Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—For sale: ideal location for flag. Prestige neighborhood. Excellent view. Choose from nearly 9½ billion acres, undeveloped. Zoning open for negotiation. Price $20 billion or more—the cost of getting there.

Ever since President Kennedy entered the U.S. bid for the moon, congressmen have had second thoughts about the price, the wisdom of racing the Russians, the wisdom of trying at all.

The first installment, $500 million, has been paid. Billions more are committed. Now scientists and even spacemen have had second thoughts—not always on the goal, but on the reason.

Listen to some of their statements:

Dr. Polykarp Kusch, Nobel prize-winning physicist: There are many great national needs "that far outweigh the needs for space exploration."

Rep. Chet Holifield, D-Calif.: "One of the things that is holding back the peaceful uses of atomic energy is moon madness."

Astronaut John H. Glenn Jr., first U.S. orbital adventurer: The accent should be on the exploration of space, not just to the moon, but beyond. "We are certainly aware of the 'race' aspects of the lunar mission, but I feel the program is completely worthwhile even if there were no such place as Communist Russia."

President Kennedy, setting the goal of putting an American on the moon by 1970: "If we are to win the battle for men's minds, the dramatic achievements in space . . . should have made clear to us all the impact of this New Frontier of human adventure . . . But this is not merely a race. Space is open to us now; and our eagerness to share its meaning is not governed by the efforts of others. We go into space because whatever mankind must undertake, free men must fully share."

Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, recently: "To spend $40 billion (sic) to be the first to reach the moon is just nuts."

Not everyone, however, feels the cost will be that great. Many incline to a figure nearer $20 billion.

It would wrong Congress to say it doesn't want the United States on the moon, first, second or whatever. But in establishing national priorities, congressmen seem to want a better reason than a mere race.

Scientists—at least those who have been critical about the moon race and the space effort—say there is little science involved in it.

But the Manned Spacecraft Center research chief, Max Faget, answers: "This is a completely new experience. All the science is there. All man has to do is observe it."

Congress seems intent on slicing at least $400 million off of the space agency's $5.5-billion budget.

Just when engineers are pleading with space agency bosses for more money.

Said one top source in the House space committee: "The space agency can live with this budget. But I won't predict that it won't threaten some delay, as they have told us all along."

So far the man-in-space program hasn't found its spokesman—the man who can capture the imagination and pin it to the heavens, the man who can speak in those terms with authority to Congress.

In fact, one of the difficulties is that the space program is inarticulate. Except for the bright flashes when a man boards a rocket and roars into space, it slips from mind.

However the moon-race debate goes, the extent and range of the U.S. effort can be decided at four stations:

1. Congress, where the plans are studied and the money set aside.

2. Space agency headquarters in Washington, where officials make the decisions to fly or not to fly.

3. The Manned Spacecraft Center, where the flights are designed and prepared.

4. The final station, something more than 100 miles up in the region where L. Gordon Cooper Jr. on his 14th pass around the earth said: "Father, thank you, especially for letting me fly this flight . . .

"Help us to complete this mission successfully. Help us in our future space endeavors, that we may show the world that a democracy really can compete and still be able to do things in a big way."

July Sidewalk Day Is Set for Saturdey

The annual July Sidewalk Day, sponsored by the retail merchants division of the Chamber of Commerce, will be held only one day this year, Saturday, July 27, during the regular Saturday store hours.

This is always a festive time when merchants take their goods out on the sidewalk to give the people of the area wonderful bargains.

It is a time, too, when civic clubs, churches, 4-H and extension clubs take advantage of selling everything from baked goods to white elephants at booths on the street. Space for such booths should be reserved from the merchants in front of whose business the organization would like to locate.

Regulation

was to give officers a chance to comment on the regulations.

At least one section of the regulations manual, paragraph No. 27 under the discharge of duty heading, will not be effective until some wrinkles are ironed out, Cooper and Brown indicated.

The paragraph states that "Officers shall be armed with an approved firearm at all times when on duty and have such firearm readily available when off duty. If an officer has need for his gun while off duty but is unarmed this will be considered inexcusable and make him subject to disciplinary action."

Cooper and Brown felt it did not appear feasible to require off duty officers to carry heavy service revolvers. A smaller gun for off duty hours was proposed, but the officers rebuffed the idea, pointing out that many of the policemen own only one sidearm.

Cooper said the Police Personnel Board would recommend to the council that this paragraph not be effective immediately.

Police officers proposed a change in shifts "in the field" rather than at police headquarters with a roll call as is the practice now. Cooper said the proposal would be given consideration.

This discussion came up after paragraph 10, under the heading use and care of vehicles and equipment, had been read. The paragraph states "Members (of the police force) shall not use police vehicles for transportation to and from work." Primarily, the paragraph is designed to prevent officers from using police vehicles for taxi service.

Officers at the meeting, however, argued that if relief officers were picked up at their homes by the officer completing his duty shift, the police car would remain in service.

"I've seen officers tied up 30 minutes or more during roll call," one policeman stated.

The last paragraph in the manual establishes a field sergeant to be in charge of each shift. In the absence of the field sergeant officers will take direction and supervision from the desk sergeant.

In current practice, the desk sergeant is in charge of officers in the field.

A discussion over eligibility for new assistant police chief—a $4,800 per annum position — also arose. The merit system ordinance states the position shall be open to anyone certified eligible by the Police Personnel Board.

Officers resent this and want the position to be a promotion for some member of the present force. Cooper and Brown stated, however, that the board felt that the assistant chief position should be open to outsiders, if eligible.

Mayor L. L. Studer also was sympathetic with the officers on this point and favored promotion for a member of the force.

The Police Personnel Board, however, appears firm in their stand on the matter and no recommended change in the merit system ordinance is anticipated.

AWARDED FOR SERVICES — J. L. Van Wagner Sr., and J. L. Van Wagner, Jr., were given the crest service award from the Farm and Home Savings Assn., recently for their long affiliation with the association. The presentation was made by Farm and Home Vice - President Morris Nunn, Nevada, Mo.

Van Wagners Are Honored For Work

J. L. Van Wagner, Sr., and J. L. Van Wagner, Jr., partners in the Van Wagner Agency of Farm and Home Savings Association, 111 West Fourth, Friday received the association's Crest Service Awards honoring their long affiliation with Farm and Home. The awards were presented by Farm and Home Vice President Morris Nunn from the home office of the association in Nevada, Mo.

Van Wagner, Sr., completed 45 years of Farm and Home service in March of this year and was given the firm's 40-year award, the association's crest in gold ornamented with a small emerald. J. L., Jr., received the plain gold pin in observance of 20 years of service.

"Although the Van Wagner Agency is a privately-owned office," Nunn said, "the Van Wagners devote most of their time to Farm and Home affairs and their loyalty to and interest in the association are equal to that of many of us who are directly employed by Farm and Home. We recognize the Van Wagners as one of Farm and Home's finest agencies."

The Van Wagner Agency was started in 1899 as an insurance agency under the name of W. H. Van Wagner and Son. The "son" was J. L. Van Wagner, Sr. In 1918 the family business was appointed an agency for Farm and Home.

J. L. Van Wagner, Jr., became a partner in the agency in March, 1943, after attending Missouri University and Central Methodist College at Fayette. He has been active in community affairs here and was president of the Sedalia Lions Club the past year. He is also past director and vice-president of the Sedalia Chamber of Commerce, a life member and past president of the Sedalia Junior Chamber of Commerce, and a past state secretary of the Missouri Jaycees.

J. L. Van Wagner, Sr., was a director of the Sedalia Knife and Fork Club and a member of the board of trustees of the Federated Congregational - Presbyterian Church.

Urban

cents per $100 assessed valuation, due to other bonds being retired in 1967.

The levy for this year is .0294 cents per $100 assessed valuation.

Some believe the money should have been invested in higher-paying investments. Others have indicated they believe the money should have been invested sooner. It was explained to The Democrat-Capital that at the time the money was received, the Highway Department indicated work on the Urban Plan project would begin at once, and the money should be available at all times.

As time passed and immediate use of the money was not indicated, it was invested. When the Highway Department indicated it needed Sedalia's share of the rights-of-way money for the Highway 65 portion of work, it was withdrawn from investment and made available. Balance of the money remained in investment in certificates of deposit locally, so it would be readily available.

The Highway Department has indicated phase two of the Urban Plan project, the widening of Broadway from New York to Marshall Avenue, then making a new highway from Marshall Avenue to the underpass and on to the city limits east, will be undertaken during the fiscal year 1963-1964, another big chunk of the Urban Plan money will probably be needed soon.

Two Killed In Six-Car Accident

Two persons died as a result of a six-car accident on U.S. Highway 50 at the Johnson County junction of County Highways Z and W about 6:20 p.m. Friday. The multiple smashup occurred during rain and also seriosuly injured three other persons, one reported in a critical condition. The accident occurred about four miles west of Pittsville.

Dead are Virgil E. Morley, 39, of Warrensburg, who was dead at the scene, and Miss Joycelyn Hook, 17, Cape Girardeau, who was dead on arrival at the St. Luke's Hospital in Kansas City.

In critical condition at St. Luke's is David Cole, 15, a passenger in a car driven by his brother, John Cole, 22, both of St. James, Mo. John Cole was seriously injured and the third person severely injured is Miss Patrica L. Massey, of Kansas City.

According to the State Highway Patrol, Morley was headed east on the highway following a truck. He reportedly tried to pull out to pass and seeing the oncoming traffic applied his brakes and went into a side-skid, crossing over into the opposite lane of traffic.

John Cole was headed west and his car was said to have crashed head on into the side of the Morley vehicle. Cole was reported accompanied by his brother, Miss Hook, and Miss Massey, and were enroute to Kansas City after attending an Assembly of God Youth Conference at Eldon, Mo.

As the Cole car crashed into the Morley car two other west bound vehicles piled into the wreckage the car immediately behind Cole and the car behind that crashing into the wreck.

The State Patrol reported the highway was blocked and backed up to between 10 to 12 miles before the wreckage could be cleared.

State Highway Patrol Trooper George Darwood was working another accident at the time in which several persons were injured and had to leave this scene to check the more serious accident. He was soon joined by Sgt. Fred Barnes also of Warrensburg, and Trooper D. E. Millsap of Lee's Summit in making the investigation.

To be remembered

is one of mankind's greatest desires. By choosing and erecting their own imperishable monuments, many persons are making sure that the world will never completely forget them. Why not select a memorial for yourself and your loved ones now?

The rear of the Chevrolet and the left front of the Dodge were damaged.

The intersection of Missouri and Benton was the scene of a two-car accident about 12:55 p.m. Friday.

Involved were a 1956 Ford, driven south of Missouri by Willard G. Self, 23, 921 West Sixth, and a 1954 Chevrolet, driven west on Benton by C. A. Rucker, 70, 1915 East Ninth.

The left rear fender and bumper of the Ford and the rear bumper of the Chevrolet were damaged.

Two trucks were involved in an accident about 4:07 p.m. Friday in the 2200 block on South Limit.

Involved were a 1962 Chevrolet half-ton truck driven south on Limit by Beulah A. Bahler, 46, Edwards, and a 1961 Chevrolet ¾ ton truck, driven south on Limit by Delmer R. Cornine, 29, Houstonia.

The right front of the 1962 Chevrolet was damaged. The 1961 Chevrolet sustained no damage.

Three west-bound cars were involved in an accident at Broadway and Warren about 5:17 p. m. Friday.

Involved were a 1963 Chevrolet, driven by Homer T. McMillian, 41, 1505 South Grand; a 1958 Buick, driven by Alvin C. Mackley, 73, Bruneau, Idaho; and a 1962 Ford, driven by Mary Juanita McKee, 24, 1014 South Ohio.

The rear of the Chevrolet, the front of the Buick, and the front of the Ford were damaged.

Mary McKee was given a police summons for careless and imprudent driving and is to appear in police court, July 18.

A Sedalia man received minor injuries when his car, a 1963 Buick, struck a tree after traveling 596½ feet out of control about 8 p.m. Saturday at 16th and State Fair Blvd.

Gary L. Johnson, 20, 2614 N. Woodlawn, received minor lacerations of the right cheek and left elbow. He was taken to Bothwell Hospital in the McLaughlin ambulance and treated by Dr. C. Gordon Stauffacher.

According to Sgt. William E. Miller, who investigated, the Buick was headed south. He said the car began sliding just north of 14th Street, jumped 14th, landed south of the street and then jumped a culvert before hitting the tree in the park way. The car travelled 596½ feet before it went into the ditch, Miller said.

Johnson will be issued a summons for careless and imprudent driving and excessive speed. Officers Robert Vogler and Clyde Nicewarner assisted Miller in the investigation.

The Buick, which was demolished, was towed away by Bacon's wrecker service.

There were no injuries in a hit-and-run accident about 7:55 p.m. Saturday at Ninth and Ohio.

Damaged was the left rear of a 1953 Mercury, driven by William Schwerner, 58, 3101 South Ohio. Schwerner told police that he was headed north on Ohio and had stopped to make a left turn onto Ninth when he was truck by a southbound car that didn't stop.

Police are investigating the accident.

The search was stopped, however, when police were notified about 1:45 p.m. Saturday that a porter at the lot had the car and that it had not been stolen.

One Person Is Killed In Accident

One person was killed and two others severely injured in a head-on collision on Benton County Highway C, three miles west of Lincoln about 7:30 p.m. Friday. Mrs. Laura Belle Heavilin, 82, Route 2, Lincoln, was killed instantly.

Injured was her daughter, Mrs. Isabelle Taylor, 56, wife of William Taylor, Burlingame, Kan., who suffered a fractured nose, possible skull fracture, and laceration in her mouth. Her condition was reported as serious.

Driver of the car in which Mrs. Heavilin and Mrs. Taylor were passengers was James Edward Laymon, 19, grandson of Mrs. Heavilin, and son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman C. Laymon, Route 2, Lincoln.

Young Laymon suffered fractures of four ribs on the left side, the left lung partially collapsed, lacerations of the face, and bruised chest, left arm and left leg.

The injured were brought to Sedalia to the Bothwell Hospital in the Fred Davis and Sons ambulance and the body of Mrs. Heavilin was taken to the Davis and Sons Funeral Home.

Dr. J. L. Watson, Cole Camp, rendered medical treatment to Mrs. Taylor and to young Laymon.

According to Trooper Glenn Means, Warsaw, of the State Highway Patrol, the accident occurred just over the crest of a hill during a downpour of rain. Means reported a 1955 Ford sedan was being driven east on the County Highway by Lee Edward Tatum, 22 of Ionia, and the 1959 Chevrolet sedan was driven west by Laymon when the collision occurred.

The left front and left sides of both vehicles were badly smashed and Means listed both vehicles as demolished. Tatum, he reported, received minor hurts and did not seek medical treatment.

The two wrecked cars were taken to the Charles Davis Service Station in Lincoln.

John Reser, Benton County coroner, visited the scene and reported the death as accidental.

She was born, July 31, 1880, in Montpelier, Ind., daughter of the late John and Maria McFarland.

Survivors include two daughters, Catherine Taylor, Burlingame, Kan., who was injured in the accident; Mrs. Helen Laymon, Lincoln; three sons, Ralph W. Heavilin, Warren B. Heavilin, and Gerald Dean Heavilin, all of Lincoln; and one grandson, James Laymon, also injured in the accident.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Monday at the Presbyterian Church in Lyndon, Kan.

Burial will be in the Lyndon Cemetery.

The body is at the Fred Davis and Son Funeral Home, Lincoln. It will be taken to Lyndon Monday for services and burial.

Mitzi Gaynor Only Good Discovery

By JAMES BACON
AP Movie-Television Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Mitzi Gaynor has been called the only important night club talent discovered in the last 20 years.

That, in itself, is not a startling fact but it takes on lustre because Mitzi is also a movie star.

For years, movie stars have been parading on the Las Vegas strip and collecting fabulous loot by merely walking on stage and shouting: "Look at me, I'm a movie star."

Needless to say, few have ever been booked again.

Mitzi made her night club debut two years ago at the Flamingo Hotel in Las Vegas. The hotel not only booked her back but gave her two points in the hotel.

In Nevada gambling language, that means she owns two per cent of the whole hotel operation—it's like owning two per cent of the Bank of America.

In addition, she gets $25,000 a week.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — After a long dry spell, the studio which Hollywool concedes has done the most for the bathtub is back in the swim.

Under direction of the late Cecil B. De Mille, Hollywood milestones in bathing were created on the Paramount lot.

Remember "Male and Female" in 1919?

De Mille dunked Gloria Swanson in a sunken tub—and bathtub history was made.

No De Mille picture ever lacked for a bathtub scene after that.

This week — two bath scenes drew the press back to the lot. In "Love With a Proper Stranger," Natalie Wood takes a bath in a strange man's apartment when the stranger walks in.

On an adjoining stage, Dale Robertson takes a bath in "The Law of the Lawless" when Yvonne De Carlo walks in.

This is a switch because Hollywood bathtub scenes seldom feature men.

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Yul Brynner is getting fed up with all the stories about his bald noggin. He really has hair.

With tongue slightly in cheek, Brynner blames his bald pate on Humphrey Bogart.

"I was a struggling young actor and television director and I met Bogart and asked him how one becomes a movie star.

" 'In our business,' " Brynner quotes Bogie. " 'You've got to be forceful and aggressive. In a word, you've got to be bold.' "

Recalls Brynner: "I didn't know the language very well then. I thought he said bald."

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Once upon a time, the movie industry always traveled first cabin, but no more says Dan Duryea.

The other day Duryea boarded a plane for London. The stewardess greeted him with the comment that she knew he was going to Europe to make a movie.

"I asked her if she had read it some place," says Dan, "but she told me: 'You're traveling tourist like all the other actors.' "

TOP STORY — Traditionally, when the highest point of the construction of a building is reached, an evergreen tree is placed atop the structure. Here, members of the gas industry place a tree of gas pipe, fittings and valves atop the Festival of Gas pavilion going up at the New York World's Fair site.

1943 Class Reunion

Dinner was served to 120 members, their husbands and wives at the Smith-Cotton class of 1943 reunion Saturday night at Holiday Inn.

Bob Marshall served as master of ceremonies and invocation was given by Bob Goldsmith. Frank Leet received a gift as the one who traveled the farthest. His reservation was sent from Germany.

Dave Robinson's Combo furnished the music for the dance that followed.

Sunday afternoon was a "family affair," at the high school, with classmates arriving with their families. A tour was made of the high school, after which a group picture was taken in front of the high school.

Another reunion will be held in 1968. Bob Rose was named chairman of reunion committee.

Great Driving Force

Conquerors of Everest Tell Of Bad Breaks and Victory

SEATTLE, Wash. — (AP — Suddenly 50 tons of snow broke loose from an overhanging cornice at Mt. Everest's summit and Jim Whittaker found himself "looking down between my feet at Tibet—10,000 feet below."

The moment was one of mortal danger for the first American conqueror of the world's highest peak, but Whittaker did not slip and his Sherpa companion, Nowang Gombu, was unaware of what had happened.

Gombu, roped to Whittaker 50 feet away as they began their descent, failed to hear the great roar of the falling cornice because of 90-mile-an-hour winds. And he was too intent on his work to notice.

Relaxing at home, the 34-year-old, 6-foot-5 inch Whittaker talked with prile ahd a touch of wonder about the consuming drive that sent him fighting to the top of Everest almost against his will and the constant threat of death.

For more than a month before the final push Whittaker and several of the others had been above 21,500 feet.

"You just don't stay up there that long," he said. "Nobody's stayed that high that long before. You get weaker and weaker as you deteriorate.

"No matter how much you eat, you lose weight."

Whittaker said the urge was to return to the base camp and recuperate for another start, but problems of time and logistics weighed against it.

"So we just sat up there, with storms swirling around, and waited."

The psychological tracks a height of more than four miles play on the mind proved the biggest problem.

"Things become much more of an effort," Whittaker said. "Putting on your boots or crampons takes a long time. You get frustrated and irritated.

"A storm would come along and I'd think: 'What the hell am I doing on this mountain?'

"But you have to keep pulling yourself together and realize that you're up here for a great goal. It's just a matter of building up your drive again.

"Finally, we decided that if we didn't try in the next four or five days we'd never make it. I felt the whole team effort hung on me. I had motivation."

So on April 27, he and Gombu set out for the top.

"We committed ourselves."

Whittaker said he was then in his weakest condition, but he pushed over the ice "just soft enough to kick steps in" taking five breaths to every step.

About two days later he and Gombu had their equipment at Camp 6, at 27,300 feet, and everything was ready for the final assault.

At 6 a.m. May 1 they drank a breakfast of hot gelatin and started off. Seven laborious hours later they were at the top.

On the way, 400 feet below the south summit they found a small metal box "just sitting there on a rock." Inside was a St. Christopher's medal, a rosary and a crucifix, given to a climber in a 1962 expedition by a priest at Matmandu, Nepal.

Whittaker said he was "very exhausted" when he reached the top but found his strength returning after a five-minute rest. He and Gombu remained there 20 minutes pinned down by the howling gale, and then started back.

Whittaker's brush with death from the collapsing snow and ice cornice came moments later.

Then their oxygen supply ran out.

For 3½ hours Whittaker and Gombu gasped down the precipitous slope, covering less than a quarter of a mile, before they reached an oxygen tank left on the way up.

"I grabbed the tank and took a few big breaths, Whittaker said.

They continued to Camp 6, slept there, and went down to 21,500 feet the next day.

What is it, then, that drives men to dare danger, risk death and undergo suffering in challenging the heights?

Whittaker found it difficult to put into words, but probably touched the heart of the often perplexing question when he said:

"It's almost like yogi, sort of a tempering-by-fire process. Overcoming weaknesses is good for any person. By reaching the limits within yourself, physically or mentally, you change yourself.

"I'll be a better man for it."

Menace on Limit Avenue

How many motorists will suffer partial disability, or death within the city limits on South 65 Highway (Limit Ave.) between Broadway and 32nd street, before some corrective measures are taken to reduce the hazards along this rapidly developing commercial area?

Two major collisions within two days appear to be forerunners of worse ones to come especially at the entrances and exits of two drive-in eating establishments on the east side of the pavement across from the Missouri State Fairgrounds. Southbound left-turn traffic at these places poses a problem in spite of three lanes. Lake-bound traffic, especially the tailgater, has little chance to avoid collision if cars ahead come to abrupt stops in this 40 mile an hour zone.

Dangerous intersections exist at 16th street, at the Country Club, at the Country Club addition, at the Southwest Village entrance, at the five-point pin-wheel intersections adjacent to the new Holiday Inn.

Nine years ago when the Urban Area Highway improvement plan was under consideration, the State Highway Department stated that from the south city limits, where Holiday Inn is now located, to Broadway no improvement was considered necessary on South 65 at that time. In 1958, within a space of four years, the Highway department noted that traffic had shown a greater than normal increase, amounting to more than 50%. Due to this increase it was decided to include the improvement of South 65 in the general plan.

Now, after five more years, the traffic has again doubled. This compounds a problem that was never originally envisioned.

The Urban plan includes widening to provide four lanes of traffic from Holiday Inn corner (the city limits) north to the Katy railroad underpass; however, it was not proposed to widen the Katy railroad underpass to provide four lanes AT THAT TIME — 1958.

We suggest the Sedalia city council review with the Highway Department the need now for widening the underpass and the highway at that point as it continues north to Broadway in the form of four 12-foot travel lanes with 8-foot parking lanes on each side, except on the west side from the railroad underpass to 16th street which is along the Missouri State Fair grounds property. Here the parking lane would be eliminated.

While Sedalia is waiting for this part of the Urban improvement to be started, traffic hazards along the stretch are progressively increasing beyond anyone's expectation.

Sedalia's Traffic Advisory committee has taken cognizance of the situation, and appealed to city council to request the Highway department to install traffic control lights at the five point road intersections at 32nd street, and also renew a request for a control light at 16th street.

The Highway department has antipathies against too many control lights on its highways because it reduces and congests the normal traffic flow, so the reasoning goes.

Until South 65 is widened, perhaps the traffic lights can be installed merely as temporary expedients.

Perhaps some consideration should be given to reducing the 40-mile speed zone to 30 from the city limits to 16th street and from 30 to 25 on to Broadway — and enforce these limits. Here again we encourter reluctance of the Highway Department to decrease speed zones.

Nevertheless, something positive must be done to minimize the traffic hazards on South 65 until that improvement is consummated, which will not be soon by any means.

Procrastination is handmaiden to traffic deaths.

"It's Just a Little Workout We Have Every Couple of Years

The Wren

"What kind of a bird is that?" asked she,
As it perched on a fence by the cedar tree
Chattering and nodding it's tiny head,
"That is a little wren," I said.
"How did it happen that it came here,
"When there aren't any wren boxes near?"
And she was right—it was very true,
But what did the little wrens do
Before man thought that there should be
Wren houses—they used a hole in a tree,
Instinct, I'm sure God gave birds all,
To build in a shrub or grass real tall,
Or fashion their nests in branches high
Or a hollow tree or brush near by,
But for wrens and martins—and other birds, too,
Man built them houses as his wisdom grew,
Instead of caves he began to build
A house for protection when the air was chilled,
He learned to heat it—he learned many things,
He watched the bird as it spread its wings
And flew about from tree to tree,
And decided: "They need a home like me."
So he patterned the house after his own
Drilled a wee hole so sparrows would leave it alone
And invited the wren to step inside,
She did, and was pretty well satisfied.
Thus, wren houses with tiny holes
Have been one of bird house makers goals,
So Jenny Wren just hops about,
She goes in her house and then comes out,
She cocks her head and opens her bill
To sing her bubbling little trill
And she and her family, from tree to wire
Flutter back and forth to their hearts desire.
"There's a housing shortage" says she to her mate,
"It looks like" she adds, "We'll have to wait."
"It's fun" said he as he flits about,
"Our vacation this year we'll be camping out."
And Jenny bristles and puts up her tail
"That" she says, "Sounds just like a male,
"I'd feel much safer in a house," said she
"Than raising babies up in a tree,
"Where out of their nests they can't easily fall
"And the cat can't get in a hole so small,"
And she looked at her would-be pioneer,
This modern wren with outdoor fear.
She stood on the fence we heard her fuss,
She was trying to protect her young from us.

Democrat Pick-ups

ALTHOUGH SHE WAS born in a small Missouri town some distance away she grew up in Sedalia and has lived here practically all of her life, but when she went with a group of Sedalians recently to another town and was being introduced to people someone asked her: "And where are you from—Springfield or Kansas City?"

Without a moment's hesitation the woman, to the astonishment of the other Sedalians, and certainly to her own astonishment, answered: "No, I'm from St. Louis."

If she had been in another part of the country or world and had been like some Sedalians, ashamed of her country town "because nobody ever heard of it" and say they are from Kansas City or St. Louis, it would be different. But she is proud of Sedalia and one of its best boosters—exactly why she said she was from St. Louis she will never know—St. Louis just slipped out and she doesn't know where it came from, but she was quick to make the correction. "I don't mean St. Louis, I'm from Sedalia," she said quickly, and everybody laughed at her giggling embarrassment. Nobody she met is going to forget very soon where she was from. They may not remember where anybody else was from but they will remember, with amusement, that she was from Sedalia.—H. L.

FINDING THE WAY

Time of Beginning

BY RALPH W. LOEW, D. D.
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

The Gestapo officers waited until the benediction had been pronounced. Then they quickly stepped to the chancel and told the pastor to come with them. The minister took a Bible from the altar. As he passed the front pew where his 13-year-old son was seated with his mother, he thrust the book into the boy's hand, saying, "Now, you begin."

Today that youth is a fearless pastor and, if you asked him how this conviction had grown in his life, he would quickly tell you of the last time he had heard a word from his father.

This true story is the symbol of the tremendous importance of influence in the life of a teenager.

Our tragedy is that too many families, churches and philanthropic groups miss the chance to deal courageously with this important age group. The advertising industry understands their importance. The cosmetic industry reaps millions each year from teen-agers. The clothing designers and the entertainment business know the existence of this potential.

Adolescence is the time of amateur adulthood, not one or the other, a time awaiting knowledge and security, belonging and arrival, the growth of personal commitments.

Our country has an enormous seedbed of idealism in its teenagers. They yearn to throw themselves into great causes and will give themselves to the most extraordinary disciplines. They demand the empathetic climate where they can find:

An environment for a search for excellence. If parents and adults settle for shoddiness and a retreat to petty escapisms, and give no incentive for excellence, they need not be shocked when they do not find excellence in their children.

A deliberate search for a growing faith. We let young people off with our own faithlessness. We can only witness, but we CAN witness.

An understanding empathy. Young people are young people; that is their charm and their problem. They need to be understood as persons who are responsible, independent, and yearning for the security and understanding which whole persons require.

The freedom of mind where there can be an honest discussion within the home. Our harried schedules defy this, but it is still necessary. Our tendency to lecture instead of listening discourages this, but it is still requisite.

In the words of the embattled pastor to his son, "Now you begin."

Three-Way Split in GOP Jeopardizes Course in '64

By PETER EDSON
Washington Correspondent
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

WASHINGTON — The standard Republican line now is that the Democratic party is so hopelessly split that it is completely ineffective.

This was the theme of the Joint Senate-House Republican Leadership manifesto.

Using President Kennedy's statement that Democrats in Congress would need Republican help to pass comprehensive civil rights legislation this year, Senate minority leader Everett M. Dirksen intoned the idea that this was a confession of Democratic administration disunity.

This raises the question of just how united the Republican party may be a year before its national convention.

As a curtain raiser, speaking at the San Francisco convention of Young Republicans, GOP Sen. Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania urged that elements of the party "not beat each other to bits." It seems to have been a futile appeal.

Full reports on this convention, brought back to Washington by participants, indicate it was a pretty rough affair. There was wide-open feuding between progressive and conservative factions. And it was only by the narrowest of margins that the organization escaped a takeover by the far right-wingers.

What this fight indicates is that the GOP may be just as badly split as the Democrats. There is abundant evidence that the ultra-conservatives make up a much larger percentage of the Republican party than in the Democratic party.

On civil rights legislation in particular, the Republican party—even if it were so completely victorious in 1964 as to sweep the White House and Congress—would have to depend far more on Democratic support to put through an effective rights program than the other way around.

The Fourth of July Goldwater-for-President rally in Washington was notable in that there were no Negro Republicans inside the Armory. The only Negroes around were in a delegation of Black Muslims demonstrating outside the hall—not in support of Goldwater, it might be added.

Actually, the Republican party today seems to be split three ways—not just two. There are GOP conservatives and progressives who correspond to the reactionaries and the liberals in the Democratic party. In addition, there is the new Republican National Citizens Committee.

This modern and moderate element of the GOP is centered around ex-President Dwight D. Eisenhower and his principles. But at the present time it has neither a candidate, a platform nor much of a following.

The 50 to 100 well-heeled Republicans who head up and, in fact, are the GOP Citizens Committee today, have as one of their principal objectives definite inroads on Democratic strongholds in the North and West. The Republicans simply have to woo Democratic voters in the metropolitan areas to get a majority.

Perhaps the only way the Republicans can get a meaningful program for 1964 is to reverse the traditional American political procedure which is to adopt a platform, then nominate a candidate to stand on it and like it.

When the Republicans convene for their national convention in San Francisco next July they might try picking their candidate first, then let him dictate the platform.

If that candidate should be Sen. Barry Goldwater, the platform would read one way. If the candidate were Gov. Nelson Rockefeller or almost anyone else, it probably would be completely different.

That's how the Republican party stands as of today.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Red Chinese Opposition Began Early

(Editor's Note—The break between Red China and Soviet Russia, probably the biggest international event of this decade, is diagnosed further today by Drew Pearson, who has specialized in watching the Communist world.)

By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON—The western world has forgotten it, but the first significant sign of a break between Khrushchev and the leaders of Red China over coexistence with the United States occurred in July of 1958 when Mr. K announced he was taking a trip to New York to attend the United Nations.

Suddenly the trip was called off. Backstage reason was a protest from Red China. The Chinese did not want their Russian colleague conferring with the other members of the Communist bloc in New York, a city which they, as non-members of the UN, could not enter. And they also did not want him conferring with the United States.

The second significant sign of the Red Chinese-Russian break occurred after Khrushchev had defied the Chinese frowns and conferred with President Eisenhower at Camp David in 1959. One of the agreements he and Ike arrived at was that K would go to Peking and endeavor to straighten out the tension which had existed between the United States and Red China over the Formosan strait. The Eisenhower administration had been worried over the Chinese shelling of Quemoy and Matsu and the risk of war.

Khrushchev carried out his promise. Within a week after the Camp David talks, he flew to Peking.

What happened there has never been fully disclosed. However, the Indian government used to have excellent intelligence in Peking, and when I was in India in 1959, two months after Khrushchev's visit, Prime Minister Nehru confirmed the report that Khrushchev had been given a brush-off.

No high Chinese delegation met him at the airport. He was kept cooling his heels for a couple of days before Mao Tse-Tung or any other top leaders saw him.

And none of them gave him any satisfaction regarding tension in the Formosan strait. The Red Chinese did not like K's talks with Eisenhower any more than certain right-wingers in the United States liked them.

Ike Is Pressured Too

In fact, it soon developed that while Khrushchev was under pressure from the Red Chinese not to patch up differences with the United States, Eisenhower was under just as much pressure from conservative advisers not to patch up relations with Russia.

In the interim, the agreement between Khrushchev and Eisenhower to refrain from public criticism while working gradually toward better understanding, showed results. When Eisenhower visited Rome in November, 1959, two months after the Camp David talks, he got a rousing reception. Even the Communist party turned out its children with small flags: "We like Ike." The reception was in contrast to the yawns received by President Kennedy, the first American Catholic president, in the No. 1 Catholic country. The difference obviously was that in 1959 the Communist party had received instructions from Moscow to welcome Ike whereas in 1963 they boycotted Kennedy.

Finally came the U-2 flight over Russia on May 1, 1960, just 18 days before the summit conference in Paris. Its reaction on Russian public opinion and particularly on the Red Chinese and Soviet right-wingers was identical to the reaction which would have taken place in the United States had a Soviet spy plane been shot down over St. Louis.

Ike Wanted Peace

About a year after the incident, Khrushchev told me what had happened at the only Paris meeting which he attended with Eisenhower, Prime Minister Macmillan, and President De Gaulle. He said that he explained Russian public reaction had been so vigorous over the U-2 spy plane that he could not go ahead with the summit meeting unless there was an expression of regret from the United States.

President Eisenhower, he said, leaned over to Secretary of State Herter and whispered in a voice which the Russian interpreter, Victor Sukhodrev, easily heard. "I don't see any reason why we shouldn't do something like that."

But Herter said no.

This, said Khrushchev, was one reason he didn't think Eisenhower ran his own administration. He described Ike as a man who sincerely wanted peace, and it was quite evident from the description of his talks with Eisenhower that he was impressed with Ike's sincerity though not with his efficiency.

This ended one of the most important attempts between the leaders of the Soviet Union and the United States to bring about better understanding. It was a far more significant meeting than that between Kennedy and Khrushchev in Vienna 18 months later, one reason being that Eisenhower, a military man, and one who had been in the White House for almost eight years, was in a better position to calm the Goldwaters, the Keatings, and the Strom Thurmonds who have constantly criticized Kennedy's peace efforts.

It was Eisenhower's ambition, as he confided to intimates, to go down in history as a man of peace.

Khrushchev caught this fact. He also understood the fact that Eisenhower had men around him who differed. It was not difficult for Khrushchev to understand this because he himself has to battle not only the right wing of Peking, which wants war with the United States, but recalcitrant advisers in the Kremlin who argue that you cannot trust the United States—just as the right wing in the United States argues that we cannot trust Russia.

President Kennedy will have one more chance to pick up the pieces dropped at the Paris summit conference. The chance will occur in Moscow when Averell Harriman sits down with Russian negotiators to try to reach an agreement on a nuclear test ban. It will probably be the last chance.

Not Ugly American

Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., President Kennedy's newly appointed ambassador to South Vietnam will never be called an "ugly American." He is one of the handsomest men in public life.

In picking Lodge the President again has put a Republican in a hot spot.

Although a defeated candidate for the vice-presidency in 1960, Lodge has displayed his bi-partisan attitude. He came out strongly for the administration's trade bill which successfully passed both houses.

South Vietnam is a difficult assignment. Lodge's many years in public life as senator from Massachusetts, Ambassador to the United Nations and his ability to speak French will aid him greatly in his new assignment.

The Republicans assert that the Asian situation will be one of the issues in the next presidential campaign and that sending a Republican there as Ambassador will not change it. That remains to be seen. Ambassador Lodge can be counted on to counteract the picture described in Lederer and Burdick's book, "The Ugly American."

Guest Editorial

DENVER POST: Undersea Lawnmower.—What we have got to do, if we humans are going to stick around here much longer, say another ten or fifteen thousand years, is figure out how to make better use of our resources.

Conservationists have been telling us this for a good long time, and most of us have listened, said yup, and gone about our business of lighting matches and cutting down Christmas trees without another thought.

Well, we are glad to be able to tell you that somebody is doing some work on the subject. A lot of somebodies are, but we have been particularly intrigued by one ingenious application of nature to solve a problem.

In British Guiana a scientist has harnessed the sea cow to make a kind of undersea lawnmower. He took manatees and put them in pools with underwater vegetation. The manatees ate vegetation at the rate of 100 pounds per day, and soon had the pools as clean as well-kept tropical fish tanks. In fact, the manatees had to be given supplemental feedings because the supply of grasses ran out.

In Florida, the conservationists who operate the five hundred miles of canals that flow through 18 counties have greeted the news with huzzahs. They have a problem and it looks like the manatees are going to solve it. The canals choke up with grasses and weeds, the waters flood, and the conservationists spend a half million dollars a year just to keep them partly clean.

The answer, they think, is to round up a heard of sea cows. And maybe next spring they will do just that.

Polly's Pointers

Bless That Man!

DEAR POLLY — My husband said, "Send these to Polly." While cutting grass on a terrace or slope, wear golf shoes. This makes for sure-footed cutting and has not hurt our lawn. In cold weather, wear cotton gloves under your rubber work gloves when you wash windows or hang out clothes. Polish golf irons with silver polish to make them look like new. — L. A. S.

DEAR POLLY — Here is a sewing tip: When making darts in the waist of a dress, I pin a piece of lightweight cardboard or a long envelope from the top dots to the dot at the end of the dart and machine stitch along the edge of the cardboard. The cardboard out of a hose box is excellent. This is a fast method and the lines will be straight and will come to a nice point.—MRS. H. L.

DEAR POLLY — Whenever our family makes telephone calls, we put 10 or 25 cents in a little "kitty" bank that stays near the telephone. Then when the telephone bill comes, we have the money ready. — MISS D. H.

GIRLS — This is a different way to budget. It would certainly cut down on the number of calls made by teen-agers, who sometimes spend most of their at-home hours on the telephone. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — I find ironing board clamps useful in reupholstering piano stools, chairs, etc. First, clamp the material in place with the spring-type clamps and hammer in the upholstery tacks. Remove clamps. No more slipping and sliding, no more baggy upholstery. You get a tight, professional look. — A. McG.

Home of the Week

THE NEW HOME of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Morton, Barry and Susan, 1816 East 14th, is green with white trim, and was built by Morton, with the help of a friend. It is a three bedroom home.

(Democrat-Capital photo)

THE LIVING ROOM of the Morton home is in the color scheme of beige, brown, orange and green, and the furniture is all Early American except the modern end tables which Mrs. Morton had and plans to replace very soon with Early American. She simply hasn't had time to get everything done, since she recently underwent surgery which put her behind in getting her new home completed.

By HAZEL LANG

"It is just a small house," said Ruthie Morton, "nothing very unusual about it." But this new home of Wayne and Ruthie Morton, with its large living room, three bedrooms, all 12 by 12 and the cheerful kitchen, is unusual, for both of them have worked to make it so.

In the first place Wayne built this home at 1816 East 14th. Then Ruthie has a combination of skills and bargain hunting is certainly not the least of them. Wayne isn't so sold on antiques, but she is, and she goes here and there, to sales, to antique shops, and buys what she happens to see that might fit in her home, real cheap, perhaps wondering at the time what she is going to do with it, but she knows she is going to use it somewhere in some fashion.

Then she took a course in ceramics and makes very beautiful things, and she sews, so she buys material she likes and makes things she wants—sometimes she finds a remnant of material.

The living room walls and ceiling are rough textured. That is the way Wayne described them, but we were reminded of a room in a very old house we visited a number of years ago with velvet brocade on the walls.

Ruthie, whom many people will know as Ruth Lower, which was her name before she married Wayne, selected beige for her living room which has a dining area, into which she has woven browns, orange shades, bittersweet, and greens.

The house faces the north, and at the large picture window are pastel orange draw draperies. The sofa, at the west end of the room is in a soft green, with a coffee table and a round table in Early American, as are the chairs that carried out the colors from browns to bittersweet in the fabrics of the upholstery. The wall to wall carpeting is beige with throw rugs of the oranges and browns. On the round table is a tall lamp and an arrangement of bittersweet and bronze chrysanthemums grace the coffee table. A large hassock is of bittersweet.

At the east end of the room is an antique table Ruthie happened to find in her wanderings around looking for nothing in particular but anything that might strike her fancy. This old oak table did, and she bought it. It had never had any paint on it but it was dark, so she had it refinished. The chairs for her dining room table she got for 90 cents apiece, and they, too, are oak. They had once had cane bottoms, but not when she bought them, so she had them caned and refinished. Over the table is a lava bowl in ivory and gold, with light purple drapes and on either side angel plaques.

A door on the east leads to a little hall, the only one in the house, but it reaches all the bedrooms and the back, straight and compact as it is. It even appears to be part of the living room and on the wall is a picture of their son, Barry, 15, in a gold frame. They also have a daughter, Susan, eight years old.

The master bedroom is in shades of lilac, with a canopy bed, large dresser and chest in maple. The spread is of floral pattern in lilac hues with lilac dust ruffle and the boudoir chair, was a real sturdy chair that somebody was going to throw away, and she got it for $3, upholstered it in the same material as the spread, and it is lovely.

The woodwork, like that of the entire house, is birch finish, and the walls are a lavender tint. The carpet is white, and at the two windows white tiered curtains with a ruffle of eyelet embroidery over lavender, at the top and louvered shutters below.

Here Ruthie has ceramics she has made, after she took a course in it. On the chest is a lovely vase in lavender filled with lilacs and violets, and on the dresser are a pair of lamps, the bases like little old fashioned wash bowls and pitchers. She even made the lamp shades of white eyelet embroidery. The frames are made of white coat hangers and the man she took them to to have them welded together thought she was a little silly, but she didn't care, just as long as he welded them for her.

A very attractive wall, an oval shaped plaque of brass wire edged with loops of the wire with purple grapes and gold leaves was on the wall. This, explained Ruthie, was picked up for a quarter at a rummage sale, the brass wire frame, that is, and she has no idea what it was intended for in the first place. Then she saw the grapes one day when she was in Kansas City, they just seemed to fit into her color scheme, so she paid five dollars for the grapes and leaves to put on the 25-cent wire frame. But it was a very handsome plaque when she finished.

She has also made ceramic light switch plates in colors to match the different rooms.

The bathroom is also in lavender shades, the tint of the upper part of the wall, the lower part of black and white tile and there are black and white striped curtains at the window. The fixtures are white and the vinyl tile floors which have flecks of gold. Her towels are both plain and floral in shades of lavender and purple.

Susan's room is a typical little girl's room with apple blossom walls and a pink floral spread with deep ruffle, the flower sprays of various kinds of flowers including apple blossoms. The furniture is maple in Early American and there are white tier curtains with eyelet embroidered ruffles at the windows. A cute little sewing rocker that Ruthie picked up at a sale or somewhere for little of nothing caused a little discussion between Susan and her mother, they both wanted it, but it isn't hard to see who won—the chair is in Susan's room. On the wall is a pair of dancing girls in white and on the bed are two giraffes, a dog and a frog, all stuffed, of course. In the corner of the room is a doll house, dolls and other toys.

Barry's room is just as typically a boy's room. The furniture is birch, and the spread is a quilted striped material of many colors with brown, gold, orange, yellow, green, blue. In one corner is a bag of golf clubs and in the other a tennis racket. Above the desk is a window with light beige curtains, material Ruthie picked up as a remnant.

The kitchen has a built in china closet on the west side of the

First Lefty to Win

Charles Captures British Tourney

ST. ANNE'S, England (AP)—Bob Charles, a willowy New Zealander with the sensitive putting touch of a safe-cracker, smashed Phil Rodgers of La Jolla, Calif., by eight strokes Saturday in their 36-hole playoff for the British Open title and became the first left-hander ever to win a major golf championship.

Charles, 27, called the "lefty Hogan" by Scottish admirers, fired sub-par rounds of 69-71—140 over the 6,757-yard, par 72 Royal Lytham and St. Anne's course and routed Rodgers, the uninhibited, wise - cracking ex-Marine, who struggled home in 72-76—148. They had tied at 277 at the end of the regulation 72 holes Friday.

Charles, a good-looking, 6-foot-2 stylist who plays with no emotion, applied the pressure to his American foe by knocking in a 45-foot putt at the third hole and taking a lead he never relinquished.

Putting brilliantly—sinking 20, 30 and 40 footers as if they were kick-ins — Charles went three strokes ahead at the end of the morning round and shot into a five-stroke lead through the 20th hole.

It was at this point that Rodgers, 25, wearing a jaunty baseball cap and swapping jokes with the gallery all around the course, made his only serious surge. Over the next four holes—the 21st through the 24th — he picked up four shots to cut the New Zealander's advantage to a single stroke.

Then the roof fell on the California jester.

On the 25th hole, Rodgers took a double bogey six and on the 26th, he holed a shot from 50 feet —the back edge of the green—for a birdie three only to have Charles, a man of ice, sink a 25-foot putt right behind it.

They halved the hole in birdie three's, but the American was never the same after that. He became more grim. His shots lost some of their zing, and, before he knew it, he was eight down. He lost strokes on six holes in a row.

The match became a runaway and the crowd, numbering about 2,000 in sunny, breezy weather, deserted in large clusters and trudged back to the club house.

New Baseball School Will Open in City

Boys interested in baseball and who are between the ages of 8 and 20 will have an opportunity to learn more about the sport at the Ron Mott - Jerry Lumpe baseball school, to be held at Liberty Park in mid-August. The exact dates of the school will be announced later.

The school is sponsored by the Ron Mott and Jerry Lumpe baseball schools, owned by Ron Mott. Classes will last through five mornings from 9 until 12. The cost will be $5 per boy.

Featured at the school will be instructions in batting, fielding, pitching, catching, base running and big league strategy. Instructors will be Ron Mott, operator of baseball schools in Columbia and Kansas City, and Bob Reising from Tennessee Tech University. Jerry Lumpe of the Kansas City Athletics will also make a special appearance during the week and give tips on how to play the game.

The school in Sedalia opens a state-wide tour of various cities throughout the state.

Managers Ousted As Phils Whip Giants 4 ot 3

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Both managers, Al Dark of the San Francisco Giants and Gene Mauch of the Phillies, were thrown out of the game Saturday as the Phillies whipped the Giants 4-3 sparked by Roy Sievers' two home runs.

Willie Mays drove in all three Giant runs with a forceout in the fifth and a two-run homer, his 17th, in the seventh. However, Ryne Duren, who pitched the first seven innings, and Jack Baldschun were too tough in the pinches for the Giants.

Dark was thrown out in the third inning for protesting tight pitching by Duren. Willie McCovey had been hit by a pitch and Mays had hit the dirt to avoid a Duren fast ball.

Mauch was given the heave in the fourth when umpire Augie Donatelli cautioned Duren about his possible finger-wetting style. The incident happened with two Giants on base and two out. Both were left.

Two-Run Triple Lifts Angels Over Yanks, 3-1

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lee Thomas, one of the season's biggest busts, hit a decisive two-run triple Saturday as the Los Angeles Angels pulled out of a 10-game losing streak by defeating the New York Yankees 3-1.

Despite the loss, the Yankees retained their 5½-game American League lead. Second-place Boston was beaten 6-4 by Minnesota.

The Angels, ending the longest string of losses in their three-season history, got only four hits off Jim Bouton and Marshall Bridges and needed a Yankee error to pull off the decisive two-run flurry in the third inning.

Leadoff man Jim Fregosi reached base on an error by Bobby Richardson and Albie Pearson drew a walk. Thomas scored them both with a slicing triple to left-center.

Dean Chance was the winning pitcher, with a brilliant job of relief by Art Fowler. Fowler came on in the seventh with the bases filled, one out and the score 3-1.

He got Richardson on a foul pop and Tom Tresh on a ground out. He then finished, allowing the Yanks a single in the ninth.

Twins' Break Losing Streak; Defeat Red Sox

MINNEAPOLIS-ST. PAUL (AP) —Earl Battey's two-run homer off young Bob Heffner in the fourth inning helped the Minnesota Twins break out of a five-game losing streak Saturday and sink Boston 6-4 with a three-homer barrage.

Rich Rollins and Harmon Killebrew hit back-to-back homers in the third.

Minnesota tagged Heffner for seven hits and six runs in the first five innings. That was enough for Lee Stange, who became the first Twins pitcher to go the route in a week.

Despite the loss, the Red Sox remained in second place, one percentage point ahead of rain-idled Chicago. The slumping Twins posted only their second win in 11 games.

Braves Whip St. Louis On Home Run

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A tremendous first-inning home run by Henry Aaron, a three-run shot into center field, powered the Milwaukee Braves in a 7-5 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals Saturday.

Aaron's 26th homer provided the edge Milwaukee needed to withstand a three-run ninth by the Cardinals, who collected home runs by rookie Gary Kolb and pinch hitter Charles James in that inning.

Kolb's home run, his second two-run job in two games, kayoed winner Hank Fischer. James's homer was off reliever Dan Schneider, who then gave way to Claude Raymond. Raymond got Julian Javier on a foul pop for the final out.

Aaron, who had three hits and scored three runs, hit his 420-foot homer off loser Curt Simmons.

The loss gave the Braves a split in the four-game set and dropped the Cardinals to fourth place, two percentage points behind the Chicago Cubs and 6½ games behind he National League-leading Los Angeles Dodgers.

Home Runs Lift Senators Over Orioles, 4-3

WASHINGTON (AP) — Home runs by Chuck Hinton and Jim King and a good relief job by Steve Ridzik enabled the Washington Senators to score their first victory of the season over the Baltimore Orioles 4-3 Saturday.

Hinton broke a 3-3 tie with his 10th homer in the sixth inning off Dick Hall, third of four Oriole pitchers.

The Orioles had won eight straight from the Senators, including the first two games of this series.

King's 16th homer broke open a three-run fourth for the Senators.

Ridzik, a veteran of the National League, scored his first American League victory in relief of Jim Duckworth. Ridzik gave up only one hit in 3 1-3 innings.

Not Surprised At Losing Record

SEATTLE (AP)—Brian Sternberg expressed neither surprise nor disappointment Saturday at the loss of his world pole-vault record to John Pennel.

"I've always said the record could go any time," Sternberg said from his hospital bed.

Sternberg is paralyzed from a fall he suffered on a trampoline July 2. Doctors have said the probability is high that the paralysis will be permanent.

A's Split Doubleheader With Indians

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Early Wynn finally gained his 300th major league pitching victory Saturday after a series of frustrating attempts as the Cleveland Indians defeated the Kansas City Athletics 7-4 in the second game of their doubleheader. The A's won the opener 6-5.

Wynn lasted only five innings, the minimum distance a starter has to go to be credited with a victory, in becoming the 14th pitcher in major league history to win 300. The 43-year-old right-hander left after the fifth with the Indians holding a 5-4 lead, and Jerry Walker blanked the A's the last four innings.

Wynn, who first pitched in the majors in 1939 with the Washington Senators, has lost 243 in his 23 big league seasons — with one setback coming this year.

Saturday's success came in Wynn's eighth try to capture No. 300, three last year with the Chicago White Sox and five since being signed as a free agent by Cleveland last month. He had last won on Sept. 8 of last season.

Wynn, a five-time 20-game winner, barely squeezed by the A's after being given a 5-1 lead by Cleveland's four-run burst in the top of the fifth.

The A's won the opener by coming from behind in the last of the eighth inning on Jerry Lumpe's tying homer and Norm Siebern's run-scoring single.

Dodgers Win 6th Straight; Oust NY Mets 11-2

NEW YORK (AP)—The streaking Los Angeles Dodgers won their sixth in a row Saturday handing the New York Mets their 14th straight defeat 11-2 on a 15-hit attack and Bob Miller's 6-hit pitching.

Wally Moon hit his seventh home run and a triple, driving in three runs. Nate Oliver, a late inning replacement for Junior Gilliam, hit his first major league homer off Larry Bearnarth in the eighth. Gilliam had driven in two runs with three straight singles before he took a rest.

Miller, a 1-12 pitcher for the Mets last year, won his sixth. It was his first complete game since April 25 when he whipped Cincinnati. Tracy Stallard, knocked out in the second, lost his seventh.

The victory boosted the Dodgers' lead over the San Francisco Giants to six full games.

Sports Scraps

By D. KELLY SCRUTON

THE Missouri State Semi-Pro baseball tournament promises to be real competition this year at the Liberty Park baseball stadium. The bracket has been drawn and 15 teams have been placed on the bracket, the 16th team yet to be selected will be pitted against the Jefferson City Red Birds in accordance with the drawing held by managers of the teams the past week.

The tournament opens on Tuesday night, July 23, with the Sedalia Merchants playing the first game at 7 o'clock with Bolivar, and the second tilt will be between Columbia and Concordia. From then on two games will be played each following night in the first rounds. The rest of the schedule calls for.

Wednesday: Iberia vs. Grandview; Pleasant Hill vs. Whiteman AFB. Thursday: Stockton vs. St. Joseph; and Art Gaines vs. Warsaw. Friday: Springfield vs. Chillicothe and Jefferson City vs. team to be named. Then Saturday two night games are scheduled with four games scheduled on Sunday. During the week days only two games will be played.

The park is left open for Aug. 3 and Sunday, Aug. 4.

George Ray, tournament manager, and deputy state commissioner, reported indications from reports on the teams which have been accepted for the tournament are that all have strong seasonal records. "We can promise the fans, this year," Ray said, "some mighty fine baseball games are in store for the baseball followers of Central Missouri. It is possible for a 'dud' or two in the tournament but the pairings and the teams themselves at present we are not looking for any."

—o—

ACTUALLY Sedalia is most fortunate in being chosen for so many years as the site for the State Semi-Pro tournament of the National Baseball Congress. The tournament first held in Sedalia back in the 30's, has come and gone, but eventually it drifted back to the Liberty Park stadium. It brings Sedalia before the eyes of baseball fans throughout the state, it gives Sedalia some badly needed good publicity and it is just downright good business for Sedalia.

I have seen many State Commissioners cussed and discussed over the operation, but most generally it has been an excellent operation, especially during the past year or so under Commissioner Lusk of El Dorado Springs, Mo. "Pop" Lusk, as he is often called, doesn't hesitate to make a decision and "that's that" and they are not bad ones.

If nothing more, Sedalia as a whole should give the tournament real backing by showing up in the grandstand at the park and helping build the gate receipts. The tournament is costly in more ways than one, and money is one item which is necessary to make it possible to be held, and possible to send championship teams on to the national tournament at Wichita, Kan.

So for the next few days, starting July 23, see if you can't arrange your schedule so you can attend several sessions of the baseball play.

—o—

SOME time ago remarks were made about what the Sedalia Park Board does with its monies and how "little" is spent supporting sports. I have news for those people on that little item. A request on expenditures some weeks ago has brought a "rundown" on what is put into baseball alone.

An example for those interested. This is a report on June. Expense of the grandstand light $22.22; baseball lighting of the diamond, May 23 to June 24 $210; 232 man hours labor for mowing grass, field layout, cleaning, repairs etc., $329.44; supplies such as baseball bases, lime, brooms, paper goods etc., $46.95; water $4.16 a total of $610.77 for the operation.

Receipts fees collected from ball clubs $146.50, and fees due but not yet collected $110 a total of $256.50.

It isn't hard to figure the Sedalia Park Board contribution to baseball for the month from their budget amounted to $354.27. I would say the Park certainly is carrying its share of the expense to give Sedalians some sport activity in the parks.

Incidentally that's for June only and July is now in progress with August and September coming up.

I venture to state that all of the athletic activity, the Semi-Pro tournament will come closer to carrying its actually cost than any sport program in the parks.

Glenn Dobbs Placed In Favorite's Seat

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Glenn Dobbs doesn't like it, but he's squarely in the favorite's hot seat as coach of Tulsa's defending Missouri Valley Conference champions.

Tulsa's pro-type passing game led the nation last season with 199.3 yards a game and John Simmons, an acrobatic 6-foot-3 end, was the nation's No. 2 pass receiver. Simmons returns along with 20 other lettermen and a talented SMU transfer, quarterback Jerry Rhome.

For these reasons, the Valley coaches voted Tulsa the likely champ at their annual summer meeting here Friday and Saturday. They ignored Dobbs' protests that line weaknesses will make it tough to repeat.

Cincinnati and Wichita, both hard-luck losers of the close ones last fall, are given the best chance of upsetting Tulsa in a league made stronger with the addition of Louisville. North Texas State and Louisville both finished 6-4 last season but aren't as strong this year.

"We lost our entire interior line, all our linebackers, all our centers and our leading passer, Stu McBirnie," Dobbs protested. "Also, we have named three new coaches since spring practice and they don't know the boys."

One of Tulsa's new coaches is Sammy Baugh.

Dobbs conceded Rhome is a fine passer and can well run out the pocket, and the addition of fleet Billy Van Burkleo, an Oklahoma transfer, will help the attack. He has a veteran backfield and four excellent ends.

Chuck Studley, captain of Illinois' 1952 Rose Bowl champs, is starting the final year of a three-year contract. He admits "we'll have the strongest team since I started at Cincinnati." Studley's teams have lost eight games by four points or less in the past two seasons.

Studley has high hopes for Brig Owens, a strong-armed quarterback and fleet runner. He's a transfer from Fullerton, Calif., Junior College. Royce Starks, an all-conference halfback, is rated Cincy's best back.

Chelo Huerta says flatly his second Wichita team will be better. Of the top 35 men, 25 were recruited by Huerta's staff. He had some disciplinary problems last season with a veteran team.

"This team is green but it has great desire and good over-all speed," Huerta said. Halfback Miller Farr and veteran tackles Fred Buss and Steve Barilla are Wichita's best players.

Odus Mitchell at North Texas State lost his entire starting line but returns his entire backfield from a runner-up team, led by Dwain Bean, an all-conference fullback. The passing game is again weak.

Merchants Defeat Base Team

A hard fighting Whiteman AFB team took a 9-0 loss at the hands of the Sedalia Merchants in play Thursday night at the Liberty Park baseball diamond.

The Merchants were originally slated to play the Jefferson City Red Birds, but it was reported they called Thursday afternoon to call off the game. The Whiteman team, scheduled to play the Merchants July 20, moved up their appearance to Thursday on very short notice.

Skip Schulz proved the complete master in his five innings on the mound for the Merchants. He fanned seven batters and issued no walks. In relief, Earl Finley struck out four and allowed no walks in his three innings. Bob Brown pitched the ninth inning for the Merchants.

Some beautiful plays in the game included a line drive in the bottom of the ninth, caught by the Merchants' Hank Spellman, who turned a possible hit into a double play. In the second inning, Jim Coons fired a perfect throw to the plate, nailing Bill Hill.

For the Merchants, Earl Finley had two hits, and John Higgins also knocked two, including a line drive off the 344 foot sign on the center field fence. Dick Horner, just off the bench in the fifth inning, slammed two hits, both ringing doubles.

Obviously getting in form for the state semi-pro tourney to begin here July 23, the Merchants had only one error.

The leading hitter for Whiteman was their fancy first baseman, Meader, who was two hits for four times at the plate.

Gazverde and Bruetch, both left handers, pitched for Whiteman.

Daily Record

• Sheriff Reports

A motorcycle stolen in Sedalia the night of July 5 was recovered Friday afternoon in some brush in a field west of the Lamine School near the Pettis-Cooper county line by Sheriff Emmett Fairfax.

Fairfax said he took Charles Closser, 17, of 212 E. Tower, to the scene about 12:30 p.m. after Closser had confided where the motorcycle was hidden.

Closser was arrested earlier Friday by Sedalia police and questioned by Chief Ralph Hamlin and Sgt. Perry Franklin. Two juveniles were also implicated in the motorcycle theft, but it was learned one of the juveniles has since been returned to the reformatory at Boonville.

The cycle was taken from the Vance Kuhns residence, 407 North Mill, and Fairfax stated the machine was the property of James M. Pangburn, 925 Summit Circle, Whiteman AFB. Mrs. Kuhns reported the theft to police early July 6.

Another cycle reported missing at the time was recovered by police a short distance from the Kuhns home. The stolen cycle was a 1953 Triumph model.

The juvenile matter was turned over to Juvenile Officer Cecil Glenn.

Chief of Police Ralph Hamlin and Sheriff Fairfax took Closser to the office of Prosecuting Attorney J. R. Fritz Friday afternoon. Closser was charged with tampering with a motor vehicle.

Four juvenile boys from Marshall, picked up early Friday morning by Sedalia police, have been turned over to juvenile autorities from Saline County by Cecil Glenn, Pettis County juvenile officer. The youths were picked up in connection with stealing hub caps in Sedalia.

Glenn said the boys were released to Saline County's juvenile officer, Mrs. Duggins, who reported the boys would be prosecuted in their court, which is permissable under the juvenile code of Missouri.

Report on the boys stealing hub caps was received from Sgt. Perry Franklin who notified police headquarters he had been told of an incident in front of 523 West Sixth.

It was 1:20 a.m. Friday when officers Al Blankenship and Gordon McDowell came upon the car with the four boys and a 17-year-old youth. They noticed the car turn on Sixth and head east and they found them at a filling station on the corner and after a check took them to police headquarters.

Glenn was notified, with Sgt. Charles Stuart and Deputy Sheriff Jack Couts they were questioned and admitted taking the hub caps but absolved the older boy of any participation. Glenn had Couts take the juveniles to the county jail while the older boy was held over night for investigation. He was released later in the morning.

According to Glenn, he said Mrs. Duggins informed him she knew the juveniles well and desired to take them back to her county and they were released to her about 10 a.m. Friday, from the county jail.

Bob Hope lights up darkest Africa in his new "Call Me Bwana," comic spoof in color co-starring Anita Ekberg opening today at the Fox Theatre.

TONY FRANCIOSA cheers up newlywed Jane Fonda by telling her that her unexpected marital problems with hubby Jim Hutton only require a period of adjustment. The scene is from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Period of Adjustment," screen version of Tennessee Williams' first comedy, which scored a big hit on Broadway. Co-featured tonight and Monday at the 50 Hiway Drive-In Theatre is the color production, "Wild in the Country," which stars Elvis Presley, Tuesday Weld, Hope Lange and Millie Perkins.

Lack of Post 16 Players Gives Optimist Victory

The Sedalia Little League saw action Saturday night, after being rained out Friday night. The following results were available in time for publication.

In the "C" league at Housel Park, Optimist took a forfeit win over Post 16 when not enough players arrived for Post 16 to take the field.

Despite a Post 16 rally, Optimist took a 13-9 win in "B" action at Housel Park. At one point in the game Optimist had a 12-0 lead. Rodney Wallace was the winning pitcher for Optimist, with Mike Melton taking the loss.

The PROOF of the PUDDING as well as the PAINT

Four years ago, away back in July of 1959, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Paul, who live six miles southeast on the Abell Road, built a new home. Being quality conscious, they selected Johns Lumber Company as the source of their building materials. They went first class all the way.

In that same year of 1959, Du Pont had introduced a revolutionary new paint, the formula of which they had researched for years. The exhaustive field tests given it over a long period of time led Du Pont to feel it would outlast the best oil paints, including their own, by at least 50% longer life. The new paint was called LUCITE. Among the sixteen beautiful, fade-resistant colors of LUCITE was one named Park Green, which was precisely the shade Mrs. Paul wanted to use.

But LUCITE was a brand new product and the Pauls had some doubts. The idea of a water base paint on wood instead of the old, conventional oil paints was a rather radical departure. Few among us want to serve as guinea pigs on a new product. And admittedly LUCITE was in this category. We explained to the Pauls how a penetrating, blister-resistant oil primer would provide a perfect foundation for a water base acrylic house paint as a top coat. The Pauls decided to give LUCITE a try.

Jim Paul followed the approved Du Pont method of first applying Du Pont No. 49 Blister-Resistant Primer to his ¾"x10" Cedar siding. He used three gallons on the siding. He used one gallon of Du Pont No. 39 oil Primer and one gallon of Du Pont No. 42 Chalk-Resistant oil paint on his trim. Then Jim Paul painted his entire house one coat with LUCITE House Paint. He used one and one-half gallons. The following spring he used another one and one-half gallons to give the house a second coat of LUCITE.

All told, Jim and Lulu Paul used eight gallons of paint to give their home three coats. Four years have passed. We've had some rather rugged winters to state it mildly. And these searing summers present a problem to the paint on any one's home. Yet after four years the Paul's home looks as lovely as the day it was painted. Please do yourself and us a favor. Drop down to our lumber yard and pick up a Du Pont LUCITE color card. Put an "X" next to Park Green on the chart and then drive approximately six miles out on the Abell Road. When you come to a pretty, green house, about a quarter of a mile beyond Walnut Creek Bridge, on the right side of the road, compare the green on the house to the green on your color card. You'll have a match if ever there was one. And you'll become a LUCITE lover just like that.

Now, much as I hate to relate, all fairy tales don't end this happily. As you probably know by now, there are giants and mean men in this world. And some of them are not averse to selling you "just as good" paints for less money. As the old saw goes, "Nothing has ever been made, but wh someone can make it worse and sell it for less." And the gullible are his lawful prey. True, the Jim Pauls were guinea pigs, even though we like to consider them paint pioneers. But whatever you tab them, they are a happy couple, well satisfied with the Du Pont LUCITE Paint they purchased from Johns Lumber Company. Most guinea pigs aren't so fortunate. Most guinea pigs end up dead, but quick. So, please, don't you go experimenting with a lesser paint than LUCITE. Remember, only the rich can afford cheap paint!

The guerrillas reportedly suffered no casualties.

PICTURED is a view of the kitchen in the Morton home with its birch cabinets with copper tile counters. The colors of brown, beige, orange and green are carried out in the kitchen, which has built-in china cabinet with glass doors that show her pretty dishes.

room, where her dishes are displayed, and below are drawers. This is the outstanding thing in this pretty kitchen making a background for the dinette set with formica top of brown, beige and orange stripes and chairs with matching plastic upholstery. At the south side of the wide cabinet is the bar with its high stools with orange upholstery.

The south and east side of the room have the cabinets in natural birch color, and on the east side are the built in oven and broiler, the stove and counter space. On the south side is a window above the sink, with knic-knac shelves on either side. The counter space is all of copper ceramic tiling, and the cannisters are all copper. Cantaloupe is the color used on the walls and the tile flooring white with flecks of orange.

The utility room is just off the kitchen, and to the north is the double garage, but the kids have taken over and the car sets out. In the garage are two beds, a table, and some chairs.

To the south the utility room leads onto the patio with its long stone planters on the south and east edges. Here are bright red geraniums and white petunias and a grand view of the brand new addition that has just sprung up around there. The grass is getting green now, after its first cutting, and on the lawn is a table with a green and white umbrella and comfortable lawn chairs. Clear out to the end of the long lot is the strawberry patch, Ruthie thinks she has an exceptionally nice neighbor directly back of her—it is her sister.

On the patio, too, is lawn furniture and a large round antique wrought iron table, which she had cut down and a glass cut for the top of it.

The house is light green with white trim, and the stone planter is also filled with red geraniums and white petunias, along with some foliage. The planter goes almost the entire front porch but the remainder of the distance on the east side has a wrought iron railing in black. Out in front is another something Ruthie picked up somewhere, it is one of those huge old black iron kettles pioneer women used for washing.

It is a together house, for Wayne and Ruthie have worked hard on it together and they and their youngsters have a lot of fun in it together, along with their relatives and friends.

'77 Sunset Strip' Gets Rewritten

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-Television Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Efrem Zimbalist Jr., bereft of his buddies and even his office, was starting the sixth season of "77 Sunset Strip," a series for which he has expressed distaste.

Yet he seemed genuinely delighted with his lot, which happens to be Warner Brothers.

"I couldn't be happier," he remarked.

The cause of his happiness appears to be Warners' Jack Webb. Chosen new head of television programming, Webb worked fast to save "77 Sunset Strip," which had been marked for extinction. Webb's ideas for altering the series won a reprieve.

The plan was bold. Swept out were all the regulars except Zimbalist — partner Roger Smith, teen favorite Edd Byrnes, comic Louis Quinn, receptionist Jacqueline Beer, cop Byron Keith.

Even the detective agency next to Dino's restaurant lapsed into limbo.

"I now operate out of an office downtown," said Zimbalist.

"But the biggest change has been in the scripts," he added. "And that is why I am delighted with the new setup. The scripts we did during the first five years were garbage. They were simply awful. We would have shows with Louie holding up people with guns and solving mysteries. Louis is a good comedian. But that kind of plot was utterly ridiculous."

Zimbalist is also pleased with the guest stars, who have included names like Joseph Cotten and Jo Van Fleet. There are indications that the series will be going on locations, instead of being bound to the Burbank studio.

World News Briefs

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GENEVA (AP)—U.N. observers will investigate whether bombs dropped by Egyptian planes on Royalist Yemeni tribesmen contained poison gas, a weapon unused since World War I and outlawed by international convention.

U.S. Secretary-General U Thant Tuesday requested a member of the U.N. mission in Yemen to check recent allegations that poison gas has been used in Yemen's civil war.

MOSCOW (AP)—The Soviet Union claims that representatives of the Western-sponsored Central Treaty Organization are plotting a campaign to help Iraq wipe out rebellious Kurd tribesmen.

This involves establishment of foreign strongholds near the Soviet border and therefore threatens Soviet security, Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko charged Tuesday in statements handed to the ambassadors of Iraq, Iran, Turkey and Syria.

New Educational Building Work Near At Knob Noster

Construction will begin soon on the new educational building planned by the Knob Noster Baptist Church for additional classrooms facilities. The building will be located to the west of the church building at 108 East McPherson Street. Razing of the building, which has been used for classrooms is almost completed, and plans call for work to begin immediately on the new structure.

The two story addition will be 38x90 feet, and will contain four nursery rooms, library, beginners room, study and office, kitchen and dining room on the first floor. The 24x38 foot dining room can be divided by folding doors to make room for four adult class rooms.

Junior, intermediate and young peoples departments will be on the second story, which will have assembly rooms for each department as well as three classrooms for the juniors, three for the intermediates, and two for the young people. There are storage areas and rest rooms on each floor.

Tentative plans call for enlarging the church auditorium in the main building and to connect the new addition with the present church structure.

Of colonial design, the building will be constructed of brick veneer.

Miss School Safety Sought By Auto Club

Young girls are being sought by the Automobile Club of Missouri to be chosen "Miss School Safety 1963" in the Sedalia area.

Girls selected will open the club's September "School's Open" safety poster campaign in this area reminding motorists to be alert for children returning to school. The "Miss School Safety" will be chosen as a typical young elementary school girl, and will have the honor of posting the first "School's Open" safety poster. A girl will be selected in each Auto Club district and will be presented an award for winning the contest.

Any person may nominate a girl by sending her photograph to the Public Relations Dept., Auto Club of Missouri, 3917 Lindell Blvd., St. Louis 8, Mo., or to the nearest Auto Club district office before Aug. 1. The only requirement is that the young miss be entering one of the first six primary grades in the fall. Photos will be returned to the sender after judging is completed.

This is the third straight year in which the Auto Club has conducted this search.

Last year's "Miss School Safety" in this area was Jamie Lea Hall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Winfred Hall.

Quisenberry 4-H Has Lesson On Resuscitation

Quisenberry Hustlers 4-H club met Monday night with Dorothy Mergen presiding.

Miss Eva Moen, from the Missouri State Department of Health, demonstrated mouth to mouth resuscitation. Mrs. Orin Chappell assisted Miss Moen.

The club voted to pay one dollar toward each camp fee for the boys and girls who will attend Camp Bob White at Knob Noster.

The annual picnic and swimming party will be Aug. 12.

Demonstrations were given by: Judy Harsch, "How to Make French Dressing;" Pamela Koetting, "How to Thread a Sewing Machine;" Janet Mergen, "How to Make a Pencil Holder;" Dale Wilson, "How to Tie a Square Knot;" Linda Mergen, "How to Make a Cheese Dip;" Karen Rissler, "How to Make an All Green Arrangement;" Richard Chappell, "The Proper Selection of Flower Containers."

Sara Gayle Oswald and Richard Chappell gave a word and picture story of their recent trip to Washington, D. C., where they attended the National 4-H Citizenship Short Course. They also led recreation.

Mrs. Byron Oswald, community leader, encouraged members to take part in Achievement Days and support entrants at the County Livestock Show. She also asked project leaders to help members finish projects.

Refreshments were served by the Volpp and Griffitt families to 35 members, 15 leaders and visitors.

THE SEDALIA DEMOCRAT

Sedalia, Missouri, Sunday, July 14, 1963 | In Combination With The Morning Capital | Feature Section

FIRST STEP — The first step used in the art of Sharpening a plowshare is proper heating. When the metal reaches the proper heat, determined by the color, the plowshare is pounded out to the proper shape by hand. Then the share is immersed in water to obtain the right temper. It must be hard enough to prevent excessive wear, yet tough enough to withstand shock without breaking off.

THE NEW WAY—Sterling Land, blacksmith, retired, tries out a new-type power hammer in the shop of Leo Greene. This hammer can forge a piece of steel in seconds that used to take hours, using hammer and anvil. Land likes to visit the Greene shop often, to talk over old times and keep up to date on new developments in the blacksmithing trade. (Democrat-Capital photos).

The Blacksmiths' Anvil Still Rings

By RALPH JONES

A heavy-set man placed his tool box and a slab of heavy steel plate onto his wagon and headed up the trail into the backwoods Ozark Country.

His destination was a small sawmill where the leaky steam boiler was threatening to explode at any moment.

On arrival at the mill, the troubleshooter inspected the boiler and decided he could make the necessary patch on the spot. He formed a thin steel strap around the contour of the boiler where the patch was needed, then formed this contour in the ground.

The man then made a 'brush pile' fire and placed the steel plate on the fire. When the steel had heated, the man pulled the plate over the contoured earth and went to work with his hammer. Soon the steel formed the proper curve for the patch. The worker drilled holes in the boiler around the leaky spot, and holes to match in the plate. Using the same brush pile fire, the man heated some bolts then bolted the plate over the leak. When the bolts cooled, the contraction drew the plate up around the leak so snugly that not a trace of steam escaped.

This incident occurred around the turn of the century. The man was Sterling S. Land ("Lightening") old time blacksmith, who now lives at 1620 South Missouri, in retirement.

A few days ago I decided to write something about an old-time blacksmith and began asking questions. The names of "Lightening" Land and Leo Greene were mentioned by several people. After checking I found Greene is still in the blacksmithing business, near the Washington Street overpass on Main, but Land has retired.

Greene agreed to allow us to use his shop, and even made arrangements with Land to take the accompanying photos. After all, Greene said, "Lightening" comes into the Greene shop once in a while just to keep his hand in the blacksmithing business, and to keep up to date on any new or interesting developments in the trade.

The ensuing conversation with Land and Greene was a gold mine of information, not only about the blacksmithing trade, but about the early history of this Mid-Missouri area.

Land began blacksmithing in this area in 1904, at Hasting, in Benton County, then moved to Deepwater, back to Hasting, to Warsaw and then to Sedalia in 1922, as blacksmith at Brown's Machine Shop. Brown's was only a little shop on Main at the time.

In 1958, Land decided he had enough of blacksmithing and went into retirement.

Back in the early days the town blacksmith was expected to repair everything from sewing machinees to steam boilers. There were no automobiles, thus no garages or service stations where spare parts can be had for the asking.

The parts were made by hand, from sheets of steel, using hand-powered blowers for the forges. Anvils, chisels and hammers, along with foot-powered grinders, were the tools of the tratle. With these tools the blacksmith beat out his own plowshares, horseshoes and other necessary items of the day.

Land told of one instance where a major steel company wanted some work done on some high-grade, special steel. He agreed to do the work, which included some grinding. Shortly thereafter he became one of the more popular blacksmiths, because he used the high grade steel dust to "face-harden" plowshares that would last many times longer than the plowshares produced by the usual methods.

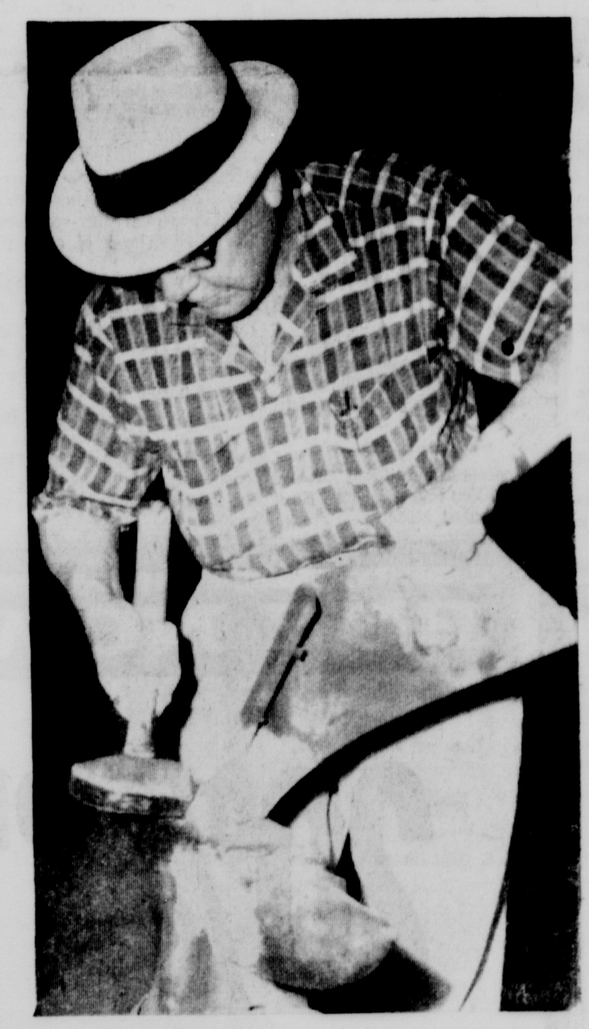

Welding in Land's early days consisted of placing the parts to be welded in the forge, and heating the parts until they melted together. A black dust to help the parts fuse together faster was on the market, but Land said the dust was no better than some sand he found near his shop. He used the sand.

Now, in Greene's shop, Land finds all sorts of new metals, complete with analysis, and welding rods to match any type of metal available. The forge has an electric blower, the grinders are all electrically powered, there is a gint power trip hammer to do forging jobs in a fraction of the time it used to take the blacksmith to do the job by hand.

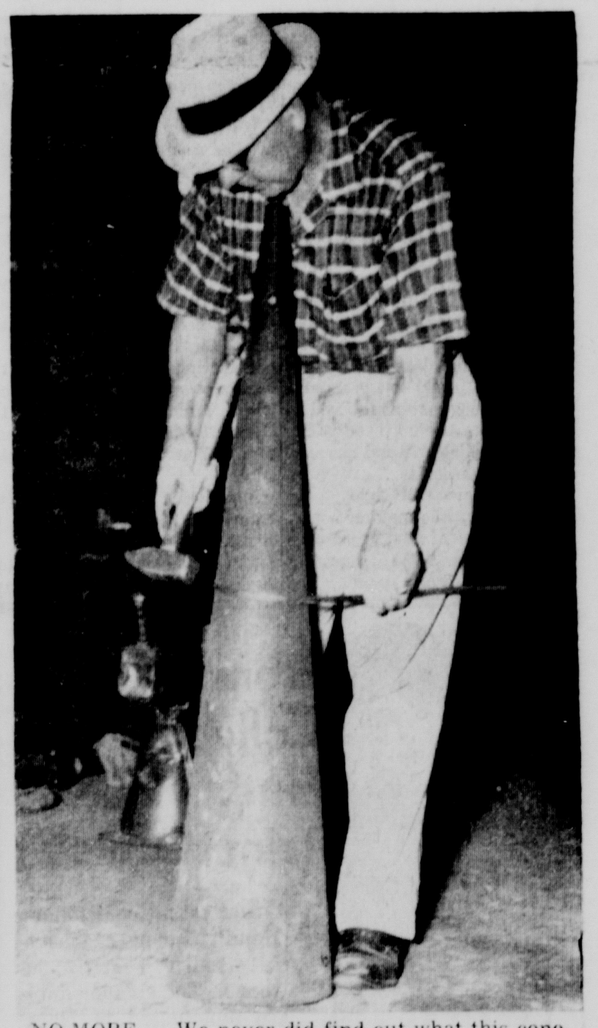

But around the Greene shop there are some mementos of the past, which we uncovered to show how blacksmithing was done, and how it is done now.

COMPARE NOTES—Leo Greene, left, and Sterling Land, right, compare notes on modern grinding and methods used in this area around the turn of the century. Now, Greene explains, this mower blade can be ground in minutes, while the operation, using a foot-power grindstone common not too many years ago, took several hours. Land says an ambitious farmer used to have his children turn the grindstone while they were resting during the noon hour.

THE POINT—With hammer and anvil "Lightening" Land shows how he used to form the point of a plowshare. This used to cost ten cents. When the price was upped to 15 cents, Benton County farmers were up in arms. With materials available around the turn of the century, this sharpening had to be repeated many times during the season. With modern hardening methods, one sharpening may last all season.

NO MORE — We never did find out what this cone-shaped tool is called, but we found out what is was used for. It was used to place the bevel in the little hoop that fitted around the wooden hub of wagon wheels to keep the spokes tight. This was one of the newer inovations, Land explained. When he began blacksmithing, the bevel was placed in the hoops by hand. We found the tool, not used for many years, in Green's shop.

THE OLD WAY — Sterling Land and Leo Greene show how a crowbar was forged in the old days of blacksmithing. They should know, because Greene has been in the blacksmithing business for 35 years, and still operates a shop on Main near the Washington Street overpass, and Land, retired, began blacksmithing in 1904. This job took two men and a lot of muscle power. The power hammer in the background can do the work in seconds.

Potatoes Grow On Tomato Vine

A tomato vine with potatoes on it is something new and different — but that is what grew in the garden of Mrs. C. B. Cunningham, La-Monte.

Just how it got so mixed up, Mrs. Cunningham doesn't know, but instead of growing potatoes under the ground, this vine had potatoes growing up the branches of the vine. The tomato in the vine, however, didn't give up entirely to the potatoes. It had one blossom at the top which grew into a little tomato.

Annually, about 200,000 U.S. Army personnel come back from overseas and are replaced by 200,000 others.

Operation Red Flag To Spur Safety Of Farm Implements

The Missouri Farm Bureau young people is launching a statewide promotion of Operation Red Flag, to be kicked off prior to National Farm Safety Week, July 21-27.

Matt O. Green, III, vice-president, Pettis County Farm Bureau, in announcing Operation Red Flag, said, "With farming activities at its peak, many farm implements will be found mixed with regular traffic on Missouri's highways. Farm highway users should respect the rights of fellow motorists and display a red flag atop a long pole, and they should always keep an eye on traffic and pull off the road, allowing faster traffic to pass when necessary."

In the last ten years 1,347 traffic crashes in rural areas of Missouri have been investigated involving farm machinery, with 87 of the accidents killing one or more persons. Certainly topping any hillcrest at present highway speeds can mean disaster for the driver who is not alert, and unless the farmer has made every precaution for safety a fatal traffic accident may easily occur.

Mrs. James Royce Covington

Kay Arquitt, James Covington Exchange Vows Recently

Miss Kay Arquitt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Arquitt, 1201 South Arlington, became the bride of Mr. James Royce Covington, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Covington, Union City, Tenn., at two o'clock Sunday, July 7, at First Baptist Church.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. R. Wallace, before an altar setting of three large banks of woodwardia fern, fronted by two seven-branch candelabra holding white tapers, entwined with smilax greenery, and two standing basket arrangements of white gladioli with pink majestic daisies.

Mrs. Helen Williams, organist, played a prelude medley of "Song of Songs," "The Halls of Ivy," "Brown Bird Singing," "O Promise Me," and "Claire de Lune," followed by traditional wedding marches. She accompanied Miss Linda Childress, Memphis, Tenn., soloist, who sang "I'll Walk Beside You," "One Hand, One Heart," and "The Wedding Prayer."

Candles were lighted by Miss Sandra Winebrenner and Miss Patsy Duly, both of Sedalia. They wore identically styled light blue silk organza, street length dresses fashioned with fitted bodices and bell skirts, blue flower trim at the waist backs, matching blue bandeaux and satin shoes. They carried decorated, lighted, white candles, and wore wrist corsages of pink carnations.

Bridesmaids were Miss Dot Highfill, Nashville, Tenn., and Miss Molly Lawrence, Jackson, Tenn. Their similar street length dresses of blue silk organza featured fitted bodices and bell shaped skirts, highlighted with three small matching bows each, down the back. Headdresses were circlets of blue with small blue veiling, trimmed with pearls. They carried colonial bouquets of pink carnations.

Miss Diane Mayhew, Union City, Tenn., college roommate of the bride, served as maid of honor. Her dress, headdress, and bouquet were like those of the bridesmaids. Each bridal attendant also wore a single strand, seed pearl necklace, gifts of the bride.

Preceding the bride was the ringbearer, Master "Chipper" Newman, son of Mr. and Mrs. N. E. Newman, Memphis, Tenn., cousin of the bride. The flower girl, Miss Diane Forsythe, also of Memphis, and a cousin of the bride, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Forsythe. She wore a white silk organza dress, and a veil attached to a floral band. The small basket she carried contained pink rose petals. Her corsage was of petite pink roses.

The bride, who was escorted to the altar and given in marriage by her father, Mr. George Arquitt, wore a chalk white gown of silk organza and rose patterned French lace. The slender basque lace bodice was styled with long tapering sleeves and a scalloped square neckline. A trace of sequins and seed pearls highlighted the yoke. Gathered with great fullness to the elongated waist, the scalloped lace skirt featured a front overskirt of silk with a pick-up effect marked with fabric bows. At the back, triple tiers of lace bordered organza curved and lengthened to an aisle wide chapel train. Her headdress was a small circle crown of white pearls, which held her chapel length veil of silk illusion. She carried a cascade bouquet arrangement of white orchids, carnations and stephanotis. Her only jewelry was a necklace of pearls, a gift of the bridegroom.

Mr. Ed Arquitt, brother of the bride, served as best man. Mr. Mack Taylor, Dresden, Tenn., and Mr. Bill Brown, Union City, Tenn., friends of the bridegroom, were groomsmen.

Ushers were Mr. Jim Rodewald, Sedalia, Mr. Rich Emerson, Grand Junction, Tenn., and Mr. Warren Ward and Mr. Ted Tummins, Memphis, Tenn., the latter two cousins of the bride.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Arquitt wore a pastel pink and white sheath dress of brocade, with pink and white accessories. The mother of the bridegroom selected a blue lace sheath style dress with lace overbodice, and white accessories. Both mothers wore corsages of white carnations.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church basement. The wedding cake was four tiered and columned, decorated in white with wedding bells, and silver trim, pink roses and silver leaves, topped with a miniature bride and bridegroom under an archway of pink flowers with rings strung from the center. The cake was centered on a table covered with full white net over blue cloth, brought up at the corners with white satin bows, and trimmed with pink petals and green smilax roping, interspersed with pink carnations. Three branch candleholders held white tapers on either side of the cake, along with the crystal punch bowl, nuts and pastel mints.

Miss Karen Rohrbach, Sedalia, and Miss Emily Fuller, Memphis, Tenn., served cake. Miss Kay Cummins, Sedalia, served at the punch bowl. Assisting with the reception were Miss Diana Drenon, Miss Joy Ream and Miss Kay Cairer, all of Sedalia.

Above this, hanging from the light fixture, were small streamers containing hearts, brides, rings, packages, and flowers in miniature replicas.

Double Ring Ceremony Unites Isabella Nelson, Charles Stahl

Mrs. Charles Stahl

Miss Isabella Nelson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest D. Nelson, Bunceton, became the bride of Mr. Charles Leonard Stahl, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hadley Stahl of Syracuse at eight o'clock Saturday evening, June 29, at Syracuse Baptist Church. Reading the double ring ceremony was Rev. Bob Potter, pastor.

Two seven branch candelabra were accented with palm leaves and pink gladioli. Flanking the candelabra were large white baskets of pink gladioli and white hydrangea.

Mr. Albert Ellis, Montrose, uncle of the bridegroom, played several organ selections before the ceremony and played the wedding march. He accompanied Miss Elizabeth Lyle Thomas as she sang "I Love You Truly," "Always," and "The Lord's Prayer."

Mr. Mitchel Collins, cousin of the bridegroom, and Mr. Lloyd Bishop, cousin of the bride, lighted candles.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a white gown of brocade taffeta. The fitted bodice featured a scoop neckline. Long sleeves tapered to points over the hands. The pleated skirt featured a panel in front and pointed back waistline and flowed to a wide chapel train. Her mantilla veil was edged with Alencon lace and secured by sequins and pearls. She carried a cascading bouquet of white Frenched carnations and pink sweetheart roses. Her jewelry was a single strand of pearls, a gift of the bridegroom.

Miss Barbara Nelson, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor. She wore a street length dress of pink chiffon over taffeta, fashioned like that of the bride. She wore a matching headpiece and carried a Colonial bouquet of white carnations.

Mr. Allen Stahl served his cousin as best man.

Guests were seated by Mr. Mitchel Collins, Jefferson City, Mr. Lloyd Bishop, Bunceton, Mr. John Potter and Mr. Stanley Brauer, Syracuse.

The bride's mother chose a pink sheath dress with beige accessories and her corsage was lavendar carnations.

The bridegroom's mother wore a lavender sheath dress and beige accessories. Her corsage was pink carnations.

The bride's grandmother, Mrs. W. J. Bishop, Bunceton, wore a dusty rose lace dress. Her corsage was white pompon chrysanthemums.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church basement. The bride's table was covered with net over pink taffeta. The table was centered with a three tiered cake, decorated with pink roses, white bells, and a miniature bride and bridegroom. The table also featured a crystal punch bowl with crystal candelabra holding lighted tapers. Mrs. Lloyd M. Whitsitt, Lee's Summit, aunt of the bride, cut the cake. Mrs. Clara Lawson, California, aunt of the bridegroom, served the punch.

Mrs. Marjorie Linhardt, Tipton, aunt of the bride, presided at the guest book.

Mrs. Larry Mace, Columbia, and Mrs. Lane Stahl, Bellflower, Calif., received gifts, assisted by Mr. Bobby Oswald, Mr. David Johansen, Mr. James Whitsitt and Mr. Larry Bishop.

Assisting with the reception were Mrs. Norbert Langkop, Mrs. Ray Burns, Mrs. Dwayne Broderson, Mrs. B Potter. Mrs. Lewis Smith, Mrs. Ed Linhardt, Mrs. Al Bowers, Mrs. Herbert Brauer, Mrs. Emmett Brauer, Mrs. Leonard Stahl and Mrs. Roy Johansen.

For her wedding trip, the bride chose a navy blue suit with white accessories. Her corsage was pink sweetheart roses.

The couple will reside on the bridegroom's farm, southwest of Syracuse.

Mr. and Mrs. Hadley Stahl entertained at a rehearsal dinner Thursday evening, June 27, honoring the Nelson-Stahl wedding party. The ham dinner was served at the country home of Mr. and Mrs. Stahl.

Honored With Shower Recently

Miss Shirley Affolter, Miss Janet Frevert and Miss Joyce Strobel were hostesses last Sunday afternoon at a miscellaneous bridal shower at the home of Miss Affolter in California, honoring Miss Barbara Ann Allee. Miss Allee will become the bride of Mr. Gary Walter July 14.

Games were played, with the awards won by Mrs. Walter, Miss Judy Schramm and Mrs. Ginger Roberts.

The gift table was covered with an antique lace cloth and centered with a bride doll surrounded by red rose buds. Read and white roses were used throughout the house.

Individual tea cakes, decorated with red rose buds, and punch, mints and nuts were served to 25 guests.

Helen Hayes To Sell Famed Home

NYACK, N.Y. (AP) — We are visiting Helen Hayes in the memory-filled house that she soon will leave forever.

"I'm going to have this last summer here," she says resolutely, "and then go."

Most of the keepsakes, pictures and furnishings which crowd every nook and cranny are to be auctioned on behalf of the favorite Hayes causes—the American Academy of Dramatic Arts and Our Little Brothers, a home for underprivileged children in Cuernavaca, Mexico. The sale has been scheduled for Oct. 11-12.

Certain letters, books and costumes are to be dispatched to colleges and libraries.

A few precious items will accompany their owner to her new apartment in New York City.

When everything has been crated and sent off, wreckers will level the 20-room Victorian house that sits atop seven terraces overlooking a woodland-serene vista of the Hudson River. A garden apartment house will rise on the site.

At least that is the understanding on which tentative sale of the three-acre property has been made to a New Jersey contracting firm.

"But some of the neighbors would like me to sell to another captive celebrity," Miss Hayes notes with a gentle smile.

The decision to leave the home which she and her husband, the late Charles MacArthur, bought in 1932 was reached after Miss Hayes returned from a long foreign tour two years.

"There used to be a staff of seven workers to keep things running," she says, "but help is impossible to find these days.

"I've been feeling like the one servant in Joe Cook's old story —I have to do everything myself."

But she candidly realizes that long-continuing domestic labors on the required scale would be an unconscionable burden.

Her daughter, Mary, died in 1949, her husband in 1956. Her son, James, an actor, lives on the West Coast with his wife and their boy.

"I've been thinking of the problems that people so often leave to their families to straighten out when they are gone. It's unfair to ask them to decide how to dispose of the accumulations of someone else's lifetime."

Across the MacArthur library-bedroom stands a three-foot ancient Persian statue of a horse, prompting an anecdoet.

"Alfred Lunt gave it to Alexander Woolcott, and Charles borrowed it—then designed this whole room around it, and never did return it."

The MacArthurs bought this Nyack hideout soon after they married. The son of a clergyman, he had grown up in this town 30 miles from New York City. It was in a nearby cottage that MacArthur and Ben Hecht wrote "The Front Page."

"Rose Hecht and I would pack a picnic lunch and come to see them on a weekend."

So the conversation runs along about every item on table, corridor wall or along the spiral stairway that lofts upward through the house's center.

A good many are associated with her famous run in "Victoria Regina." A set of rare etchings of Victoria with her 16 original ladies in waiting; miniature glass-cased stages with play scenes; mementoes from Gilbert Miller, Laurence Olivier, Lillian Gish, "a little dohicky, a Victorian inkstand whimsey" from John Gielgud.

A salad bowl on the lunch table turns out to have been sent along by John Barrymore the time he dropped in one afternoon for a cigarette—and stayed three days.

Encouraged By Ben Bella

Algeria Is a Magnet To African Revolutionaries

ALGIERS (AP) — Premier Ahmed Ben Bella's quest to become Africa's leading revolutionary is turning Algeria into a main base of nationalists seeking independence.

Political exiles and nationalists from Portugal's colonies and from South Africa are flocking to Algeria in search of support.

Despite Algeria's internal difficulties, Ben Bella has promised arms, money, training facilities and volunteers to free Africa of the remnants of colonial rule.

"I myself will fight if necessary," he emotionally told a recent rally.

The government maintains secrecy on what has actually been done to help African nationalists.

Angolan guerrilla fighters are training in several Algerian camps. Estimates of the number vary from 300 to 1,000. They use weapons that served Algerians during their rebellion.

Representatives of the "National Liberation Front of Angola" conduct an active press campaign with the government's help. Algerian newspapers denounce Portugal's conduct in Angola and threaten intervention.

At the recent Addis Ababa summit conference, Ben Bella pledged 10,000 volunteers to help Angola's fight against Portuguese rule.

Last week, Ben Bella personally inaugurated the headquarters of the South African "National Congress," an organization pledged to the elimination of white rule in South Africa. The headquarters, headed by Robert Rescha, is to serve as the main coordinating and propaganda center for French-speaking Africa.

"We are convinced that our struggle in South Africa will take the same form as in Algeria," Rescha said in an interview. "It is essential for us to keep in dynamic contact with our brothers in Algeria to benefit from their experience."

Rescha said the Algerian government "is one of the most practical governments we have dealt with in Africa. It has given us more material assistance than moral."

He declined to specify what Algeria's assistance consisted of. Ben Bella has announced he has earmarked the equivalent of $200,000 to help the struggling nationalists.

In helping nationalists from Angola, Mozambique and South Africa, Ben Bella apparently would like to build a debt of gratitude toward Algeria which would help foster his leadership in Africa.

Another factor is Ben Bella's conviction of the importance of his role as a liberator and revolutionary.

"Ben Bella is convinced that he is the most prominent, most successful revolutionary in Africa," a Western diplomat said. "His help for the nationalists is largely tied to this belief."

Ann Landers

Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: What can I say to a good wife and mother who NEVER reads a newspaper because she insists she doesn't have the time? The Red Chinese could be on our porch and she wouldn't know it. We have four children under 10 years of age, a seven room house, two dogs and a garden. She IS busy, Ann, and I would be the last person in the world to deny it, but all the same it's appalling that this woman can't somehow manage to devote 15 minutes of her day to reading a newspaper.

I made the mistake of bringing up Ethel Kennedy yesterday and she almost took my head off. Please give me another approach. There must be a logical answer that I can give her but I don't know it. Help! Help! — BRICK WALL

Dear Brick: Everyone has equal time—no more, no less. Even the Kennedy's get only 24 hours a day.

People who insist they can't find time to do this or that should be reminded that it's the division of time—and not a shortage—which determines what gets done.

The cliche is accurate: "If you want something done, ask a busy person. He'll do it."

Dear Ann Landers: Six weeks ago I sent for some merchandise which was advertised in a reputable national magazine.

I recived a package with a letter attached saying they no longer had the merchandise I had sent for but they were sending a substitute of equal value and they were sure I'd be pleased.

Well it was not of equal value, it was plain junk—and I was not pleased. I mailed it back to them and attached a note saying if they could not send me what they had advertised in the magazine to please return my check for $5.00.

Four weeks have passed and I have heard nothing. How do I go about getting my money back? I know they are not going to get rich on my $5.00 but if they can pull this on several thousand suckers every month it sure beats working. Thanks for your help.—DUMB CLUCK

Dear Cluck: Write a letter to your postmaster and explain in detail what happened. The post office department will investigate the outfit. If they are shady operators they'll soon be out of business (and you just may get your $5.00 back).

Dear Ann Landers: Please pass this word on to "Dim Hopes," the poor kid who was getting headaches trying to study in the kitchen under a 60 watt bulb. At today's average rate of three cents per kilowatt hour, the added cost of burning a 100-watt bulb over that of a 60-watter would be about ⅛ of a cent per hour, or 80 hours for the price of a candy bar. This is hardly worth making a fuss about.

And I'll bet that 60 watt bulb is in a ceiling fixture when it ought to be in a portable lamp beside her bed or on her desk. This means she is getting at the reading level only 1-30 or 1-40 the amount of light out of the bulb. If it were properly placed she'd have no problem.—A.M.P. LIGHTING SPECIALIST FOR G.E.

Dear A.M.P.: Thanks for your explanation. I received many letters from lighting specialists (some called themselves engineers) but yours was the easiest to understand. I hope this will help the young lady see the light.

Confidential to BORED STIFF: I know the type—one ear and two mouths. Your only out is to make a "previous engagement" immediately.

Confidential to THE WRECK OF THE HESPERUS: If you must cry over split milk, Madam, please condense it. Fifty-three typewritten pages is an enormous amount of reading. Please try again and so will I. I want very much to help you.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

From Rising Lake Water

Biggest Rescue Operation Since Noah and The Ark

By ADRIAN PORTER

KARIBA, Southern Rhodesia (AP)—A big bull buffalo struggled from the water after a two-mile swim, pulled itself through the mud to dry land, moved off slowly into the African bush — and brought to an end the world's biggest animal rescue operation since the ark.

The buffalo was the last of nearly 6,000 animals — ranging from foot-long snakes to six-ton elephants—rescued from the rising waters of Lake Kariba. It is the biggest manmade lake in the world, as the flow of the Zambezi River backed up against the huge dam built across its path in Kariba Gorge to provide hydroelectric power for Rhodesia.

"Operation Noah," as the rescue was dubbed, began 4½ years ago, before the foundations of the Kariba dam were laid. Lake Kariba was planned to extend 250 miles up river from the dam and reach a maximum width of about 50 miles. In this area lived a complete range of African wild life which had to be moved or be drowned or stranded on islands without sufficient food.

The Southern Rhodesian department of wild life conservation appointed game warden Rupert Fothergill to head a team of four whites and 60 Africans to take on the mammoth job of getting the animals to safety.

Now, after more than four years of coaxing, forcing, and carrying reptiles, animals, and birds from fast-disappearing islands in the rising lake, Fothergill and his men are able to call it a day. Some animals were left on big islands on which game rangers were satisfied they would be able to survive.

Fothergill says the job was a tough one.

"We worked more or less on a trial and error basis and we learned as we went along.

For instance, we found from experience that women's nylon stockings were ideal for tying antelopes' legs without hurting or damaging them too much."

Fothergill also learned from experience that firing drug-filled hypodermic syringes at rhinoceros was the easiest way to handle these bad-tempered beasts. Once drugged, rhinos were tied by the legs, loaded on rafts and towed to the mainland where the game rangers loosed the knots and retired to a safe place as the beasts regained consciousness.

Normally mild antelopes choking and screaming in fear and threshing about with sharp hooves as they were captured gave Fothergill another headache but he soon found that the big species could swim for themselves and only the smaller kinds had to be carried in boats.

He found, too, that elephants could swim for miles if coaxed to the mainland with boats behind them. But snakes had to be handled. One of his worst jobs was moving around partly submerged trees catching branch-bound snakes in loops of rope on the end of sticks, pulling tight and then gingerly dumping them in sacks.

Fothergill returns to his headquarters in Salisbury for a spell on paper work and most of his team will be disbanded. A white game ranger and African assistants will remain at the lake to keep an eye on game left on the islands and those living in the bush around the lake.

How to Run Your Home in Less Time

By MRS. FLORENCE W. LOW

President, American Home Economics Association

with Theodore Irwin

DESPITE the laborsaving devices constantly being invented, three out of five women consider "lack of time" their biggest home-front problem, a recent government survey revealed.

How can a harassed homemaker find practical ways to s-t-r-e-t-c-h time? To tackle the knotty question, a pilot program we called "Homemaking Short Cuts for the Working Woman" was launched last November in Washington under the joint auspices of the American Home Economics Association and the National Association of Home Builders. Hundreds of women jammed the National Housing Center to hear our experts tell them how to make more efficient use of minutes and hours. Now similar programs are being set up in other cities.

Leading home economists have devised many practical timesaving tips, all thoroughly tested. From the vast reservoir of such homemaking short cuts, I have selected these as being especially effective.

Equipping Your Home. When buying new house furnishings, consider the color or finish in relation to upkeep. Dark rugs and furniture show dust and finger marks much more than light and medium tones do.

In a two-story house, a second vacuum cleaner and ironing board on the upper floor will reduce steps, save time.

Buy sheets with fitted corners to cut down on motions in making the average bed. If you have a variety of bed sizes, pick different patterns or colors for double-bed and single-bed sheets.

By installing air conditioning, you shorten dusting and cleaning chores. Wall-to-wall carpeting reduces floor-care time.

House Care. Time yourself on cleaning jobs and know which can be done within a certain period. For example, when you have five minutes to spare while waiting for dinner to cook, you can do a five-minute job such as removing crumbs from your toaster and polishing it.

Have a portable container for often-used cleaning supplies and keep it ready to be carried to any area.

Dovetail your tasks. For instance, do mending or ironing while cooking or while watching your child do his homework.

Discard or store nonessential kitchen utensils. It's a waste of time trying to keep cluttered drawers and cabinets in order.

ILLUSTRATION BY JOHN ALLEN

Harried housewives, here are homemaking short cuts devised and tested by experts

Let the clothes dryer fluff and remove dust from shag rugs, chenille items, bed and sofa pillows. Tumble draperies for a few minutes in the dryer to dust and freshen them. Most fabrics will not need pressing if you remove them from the dryer and hang them immediately.

Food Preparation. Make once, serve twice. When preparing stews, casseroles, or meat loaf, double or triple the quantities. Serve part and freeze the rest for later use.

Have a cooking day occasionally. Prepare items that keep well in containers for quick use when removed from the freezer.

The mess that is not made never has to be cleaned up. To prevent boil-overs, cook most fresh vegetables with ½-¾ inch of water in a covered saucepan (this also conserves food values). Start cooking bacon, chops, or hamburgers at low or medium heat to keep spatters to a minimum. Trim fat before broiling meat.

Take advantage of fix-ahead desserts. Many, such as puddings and gelatins, can be prepared in the morning or the night before.

Wrap hamburgers, bacon, chops, steaks, and sliced meat so they can be taken out of the freezer in the desired portions.

If you intend to serve orange juice from a frozen concentrate, take the can out of the freezer the night before and put it in the refrigerator. It will be easy to mix the next morning.

Care of Clothes and Linens. Provide sorting boxes or bins labeled "White," "Dark," "Delicate," "Heavily Soiled," and "Need Mending." A load or two from the fullest bin may be washed while some other job is being performed.

Group articles together which should be ironed at the same temperature.

When possible, remove clothes from the line or dryer while damp and iron immediately.

Shopping. Use your telephone as a preshopping aid rather than going from store to store to locate needed items. When feasible, buy by phone. Also, use manufacturers' brochures to get product information before going out to buy.

Arrange your shopping lists according to the location of stores on your trip. Organize your grocery list to follow the arrangement of departments in the supermarket.

If storage space permits, buy in quantity such things as paper tissues, laundry supplies, bottled goods, canned and packaged foods.

If several members of your family wear about the same size, buy a different brand of socks and underwear for each. This simplifies sorting without using name tags.

Establish a contact with a food store which makes home deliveries. In emergencies, you may find the timesaving well worth the extra cost.

To make homemaking simple, our home economists find the keynote to be "Plan ahead, buy ahead, make ahead."

The short cuts suggested here may mean giving up some old habits, but the rewards in added leisure can be deeply satisfying.

DON'T YOU READ BEFORE YOU BUY?

Your customers do, too.

They read; they cut out and pin on bulletin boards; they write in margins; they show to their friends; they clip and send in for more information. They choose colors, admire designs and compare styles.

And then they decide. Then they buy.

Like you, they look to print advertising for information about all kinds of products they're about to buy: cars and cash registers, cosmetics and clothes, sandals and sewing machines, garages and grass seed.

So if you and your product are in close competition with other advertisers and their products—better put part of your advertising in print. Better put it where readers and studiers and ready-to-buy buyers can find it.

Print makes sense, because print makes sales.

WHAT I WOULD TELL A SON

Though he never married and had children of his own, the nation's No. 1 crime fighter offers this simple but inspiring credo for parents

By J. EDGAR HOOVER

Director, Federal Bureau of Investigation

AS I PONDER the problems we find ourselves all but swamped by today, I cannot help thinking that the rules which prevailed in my youth would still work for boys and girls now.

The Hoovers, for example, were a close-knit family. My mother and father shared equally the pleasures and the responsibilities of one daughter and two sons. Our circumstances were modest; yet none of us ever wanted for any necessity of life—and those necessities were, then as now, affection and the security of a balanced home.

Our parents taught us to have a good time, but to do it without trampling on the rights or property of others. The boy who went astray in those days worried a lot more about the punishment he knew was waiting for him at home than about the treatment he might expect from the police, the courts, or other authority. How seldom is this true of "problem" youths today!

Make no mistake: my young friends and I were healthy, active boys. We had the same boundless energy and inquisitive nature that have marked young people since mankind began. Yet we kept out of trouble, and when we didn't, we were man enough to face the music.

Why? I feel there were two basic reasons: first, we came from well-disciplined homes where the same definition of right and wrong applied to all members of the family; and, second, we honored our mothers and fathers and respected their word because, by their unfailing example, they truly merited our honor and respect.

If I had a son, I believe I could help him most by providing him with these five indispensables: a personal example to follow, an understanding of the importance of restraint and ideals, a sense of discipline, a pride in his heritage, and a challenge to meet.

Children certainly need an example to follow. I feel the most important lesson which my sister, my brother, and I received at home was the example set by our honest, hard-working parents. A plaque on our living-room wall summed up the whole thing. It read: "To command the respect of others, one must merit respect himself." Under this definition of responsibility, how many of today's parents can honestly claim the respect of their children? Certainly not those thousands who subscribe to the "do as I say, not as I do" philosophy!

As youngsters, we enjoyed life and the humorous give-and-take of healthy family relationships, but that was something far different from today's child-dominated "democracy," which all too often creates chaos in the home. Contradictions and inconsistencies never existed in our household because my parents took the long view: they felt that whatever "privileges" their adult years bestowed on them were inconsequential compared with the responsibilities of parenthood.

If I had a son, I'd think constantly about the part I had in helping him become a man. I would do my level best to understand him, to be a pal without being a pest, to encourage his boyish love of games and adventure, to direct him quietly to the right kind of friendships—those he would find, for example, in the Boy Scouts and the Police Athletic Leagues. I would not go out of my way to make life hard for him, but I would guide him to an awareness that life is not meant to be easy and that the best rewards come from the hardest efforts.

We would not have a forest of rules to cramp our growing up together—this son of mine and I—but both of us would know the handful of expectations I had established because I loved him. And both of us would know I'd see to it that he fulfilled those expectations, or else.

To help him grasp that while life may be hard it is also rewarding, I would impose the gentle pressure of performing regular tasks well within his capacity at each age level. I would gradually increase my requirements and penalize him proportionately if he let them slide—until that welcome day when he would begin to put the pressure on himself.

Criminals Share a Common Fault

Above all, I would teach him to tell the truth—and I, in turn, would tell him the truth no matter how it hurt or embarrassed. Truth telling, I have found, is the key to responsible citizenship. The thousands of criminals I have seen in 40 years of law enforcement have had one thing in common: every single one was a liar.

In addition to setting a good personal example, I would also teach a son the importance of restraints and ideals.

Contradictions arise continually in the lives of teen-agers, for today our youth must cope with the specter of an adult world rife with inconsistency. To the youngster, adults often appear by their attitudes to be saying: "Ignore traffic regulations!" "Make your own rules!" "Cheat whenever you think you can get away with it!" To turn the screw harder still, there are the unreasoning demands of an often arrogant juvenile world: "Don't be a square!" "You're chicken!" "Join the crowd!"

But teen-agers who have a strong set of standards to fortify their native intelligence do not fall prey to the smut merchant, the narcotics peddler, or the rest of the rodent swarm which fattens commercially upon the inexperience and natural curiosity of youth. These young people have developed, with parental aid, the moral restraint to rise above temptation, to turn their backs on the "smart set," and to remain true to their ideals.

Today, too many young people are developing neither the moral standards nor the restraint necessary to get along in a free society. Every community has its share of these youth. They are the members of teen-age gangs who belligerently roam the streets in search of "a rumble"; the school "drop-outs" who waste endless hours in unproductive idleness and, often, wrathful despair; the juvenile thrill seekers whose early delinquencies inevitably lead them to progressively more serious crimes.

These are unhappy youth. Their arrogant defiance of authority is a pitiful pose that seeks to conceal the tragic fear and insecurity which they feel. This fear, this insecurity exist because we have failed to prepare them to meet the personal demands and responsibilities of life in our American republic.

The way out of this dilemma is for youngsters to acquire a sense of discipline. But before a boy can practice self-discipline, he must learn discipline from others. We must establish for him standards of acceptable behavior—and we must enforce those standards.

"I tried to do the best I could, but I can't control him . . ." This was the weak lament of a doting mother whose 15-year-old son had been arrested for assault and robbery. How familiar her words are to every law-enforcement officer.

Children need guide lines. We owe it to them to spell out what they may and may not do. We must hold them strictly accountable when they breach the rules of decent conduct. When we are weak or inconsistent, when we pamper or overprotect—even in the preschool years—we set a pattern of confusion for our children. In the years ahead, our mollycoddling can lead only to their resenting and despising authority.

A youngster also must be taught to have a pride in his heritage. Theodore Roosevelt, a man of great strength and discipline, had boundless love for his country and her ideals. "Americanism," he said, "means the virtues of courage, honor, justice, truth, sincerity, and hardihood—the virtues that made America. The things that will destroy America are prosperity at any price, peace at any price, safety first instead of duty first, the love of soft living, and the get-rich-quick theory of life."

Know the Enemy of Freedom

President Theodore Roosevelt knew that America was born of adversity. He believed that her people have risen to their greatest heights in the face of grave challenge. He knew also that softness—mental, physical, or spiritual—is the mortal enemy of all who cherish freedom.

Has a "softening process" begun to set in for this generation and its elders? I earnestly hope not. Still, the danger signs are clear. They signal the growing need for all of us to increase vigilance against this disease that eats from within.

Finally, I want to stress the importance of challenge, which is the indispensable compatriot of free men. It is a wellspring of alertness and vitality for nations which find themselves tempted to grow complacent and slothful.

Our youth need challenge. We must destroy the false conception which today increasingly saps their spiritual stamina with the lie that life in a democracy is a mere jumble of rights and privileges without responsibilities. From their very early years, young people should have individual chores, specific goals, constructive projects to help sharpen their capabilities and develop strong character.

Above all, our youth need our help to insulate them against the negative forces—immorality, overindulgence, apathy, neglect—which prevail in so many areas of modern life. For doing this vital job in a way that will last a lifetime, there is nothing like a healthy home.

By no choice of our own, we Americans find ourselves facing a deadly situation—the most critical in the nation's history. Communism, a treacherous international conspiracy which now controls nearly one-third of the earth's peoples, challenges our very right to live in freedom under God. Coupled with it is the menace of a growing crime problem, one that flourishes in—is, in fact, largely caused by—the prevailing atmosphere of adult aloofness and indifference.

Today the bright burden of freedom rests squarely in our hands. Tomorrow we must pass it on to the new generation—to the boys and girls I have been talking about here. It is up to us to make sure that we hand it over to strong young citizens capable of meeting the test that lasting freedom imposes daily.

Death of a Sub Killer

Off our Florida shore, a U. S. blimp sights a German U-boat and attacks; here—on the 20th anniversary of the encounter—is a thrilling, little-known chapter from World War II

By SI LIBERMAN

News Editor, Asbury Park Sunday Press

Editors' Note: A Naval era has ended: the last two of the Navy's lighter-than-air vessels—those familiar sausage-shaped blimps—were decommissioned in 1962 at Lakehurst, N.J. During the war these vessels protected our shores against marauding submarines, sometimes at great risk, as the following story of the K-74 testifies.

IT WAS A BEAUTIFUL summer evening—hardly a cloud in the sky or a whisper of a breeze. Visibility seemed unlimited as the K-74, a 250-foot-long blimp, slowly pushed skyward from its mooring at Richmond Naval Air Station in southern Florida.

The 10-member crew had never flown together as a unit on submarine patrol before, but each man either had experience with other crews or months of intensive flight training. None dreamed that this routine mission almost within sight of the coast would soon explode into a battle unparalleled in United States Naval history.

The date was July 18, 1943. Germany's U-boats—reportedly 500 to 700 strong—were still prowling the sea lanes in wolf packs, riddling convoys with torpedoes in a last-ditch effort to master the seas. Nearly 600 merchant ships had fallen victim, and the Allies were feverishly striving to develop an ironclad defense against them.

The airship, armed with newly perfected radar and depth bombs, was earning a reputation as an effective sub killer; the K-74, now lazily heading out over the Florida Straits, was part of an Atlantic fleet of 200 airships in the Navy's Anti-submarine Defense Program. It carried four depth bombs and a 50-caliber machine gun.

The moon was almost full, and the ocean was calm with only a slight swell. Midnight was an hour away, and navigator John Jandrowitz had just clocked the wind at 10 knots an hour. Then suddenly the idyllic peace was shattered by the shrill ring of the general-quarters alarm.

"We've got a blip on radar off starboard," Lt. Nelson E. Grills, the 28-year-old sandy-haired commander, announced over the intercom.

"I see a sub!" shouted Machinist's Mate 1st Class Isadore Stessel, the bombardier from Brooklyn. "To the left. It's surfaced."

The moonlight had created a perfect silhouette. It was a submarine, all right, sleek and streamlined. Its hull looked like a fast-swimming fish, and it was leaving a trail of foamy white wash.

"We can't be more than 30 or 35 miles east of Key West," a crewman said: "Must be ours."

"I doubt it," the commander declared, "but let's go back so we can get a good look at her."

Ensign Darnley Eversley, the copilot, turned the cigar-shaped airship right and made two circles from a distance of two miles, enabling the crew members to assess the submarine.

All agreed it had a rear deck gun, long and low, separated from the conning tower. There also appeared to be a forward gun and a twin-mount in the conning tower. But the aft gun was the clue, for only the German 750-ton U-boat was known to have one separate from the conning tower. It was characteristic of the German 750, and so was the low railing.

Grills checked his flight folder again. His charts showed that a convoy of nearly a dozen ships was to be in these waters in the morning.

"I guess we ought to get her," Grills concluded without emotion.

Slowly and methodically, Eversley started the blimp on its third circle, swinging into a southerly direction to come in behind the sub for the bomb run. He increased his speed to 1,700 RPMs, dropped down to 250 feet above the water, and headed straight for the U-boat's starboard side. A burst of gunfire came at the blimp as she drew within 200 yards of her target.

"Starboard engine's afire," shouted Jerrold Gidding, on aft lookout.

Machinist's Mate 3rd Class John L. Schmidt aimed an extinguisher through the right window at the engine, while the gunner, Garnet Eckert, Jr., fired two short bursts—then a long one.

The sub halted its fire, apparently stunned by the blimp's gunpower and Eckert's accuracy.

When the airship pulled to the right side of the sub, Grills leaned back and tapped Stessel: "Drop one . . . drop two."

Stessel pressed down on the bomb releases.

"What's the matter?" Grills called as the blimp started over the sub. The airship had not bobbed up from the loss of weight as it always does when depth bombs or heavy gear are dropped.

"Releases are stuck," Stessel answered.

"And we were right on her!" Grills groaned. "We couldn't have missed."

ECKERT HAD FIRED his first belt of 60 shells and was completing his second when he was suddenly tossed off target! The blimp was on a steep, uncontrolled climb.

Ensign Eversley snapped back the throttles to break the climb but seemed powerless. The airship, still over the submarine, was standing on its tail and still climbing.

His only thought was to get away from the sub—as far away as possible. He continued pulling the throttles, trying desperately to level off.

The submarine's gunfire resumed, and some shells ripped through the plastic front windows of the gondola. Schmidt reported that the fire in the right engine was out, but now the left one had been hit.

"We're going to ditch," Grills warned, pressing the crash button. Fuel tanks were dropped to lessen the danger of an explosion.

"Starboard engine afire!" the aft lookout reported as Eckert fired two short bursts and then a long one at the sub.

Sub Killer

The submarine, still firing, made a hard turn and headed east. It didn't submerge.

The blimp's big rubber bag, torn with bullet and cannon holes, was partially deflated when the airship hit the water. Radioman John Rice, noting the time of 23:53, completed his last mayday call. Water covered the floor of the gondola.

"Abandon ship!" Grills ordered. Crew members quickly pulled the plugs to inflate their yellow life preservers and then made their way out via window escapes on both sides of the partially submerged gondola.

"Everyone's out all right and clear of the ship," Grills called to Eversley. "The life raft went down with the stern. Better get out of here because that sub may be looking for us. I'm going back to the ship to make sure the radar is destroyed and the flight-code book sunk."

Ensign Eversley called the men around him after Grills swam away. "We can do two things," he said, "either go back to the ship, which can be seen better by searchers—and also that submarine—or swim away from here. Each man decide for himself."

Four men—Rice, Schmidt, Radioman 3rd Class Robert Bourne, and the assistant gunner, John Kowalski—chose the former and followed Grills to the wreckage. Eversley, Jandrowitz, Gidding, Eckert, and Stessel swam out to sea.

WHEN DAWN CAME, the wreckage was still in sight, and new hope came over the Eversley group. "Look! Look!" Eckert pointed. A blimp appeared on the horizon. It was just a speck miles away. But it didn't come nearer and finally disappeared.

About two hours later a pair of blimps appeared and flew almost directly overhead but gave no indication of having seen the survivors. A few more minutes and a twin-engine seaplane came over the wreckage and dropped a parachute. The chute contained a package of supplies, but it landed out of sight and out of reach.

The men knew now that they had been seen. Rescue must be imminent.

"It won't be long now," Eversley shouted to Stessel, and started swimming toward him. The bombardier, trying to keep himself above water, was about 30 yards away. The copilot planned to pull him closer to the other men. Eversley heard Stessel yell and stopped for a moment.

"There's a shark! There's a shark!" Stessel screamed, pointing to a black fin that was circling him. Eversley, barely 15 yards away, froze.

The shark circled Stessel two or three more times, then suddenly struck at him like a trout hits a fly.

"Oh my God! Help me!" Stessel cried as he splashed wildly with both arms. His face was covered with blood. The long, black monster had locked onto Stessel's waist and was tugging like a dog trying to pull away a bone. Its fin was slapping the water.

Eversley turned in horror. He couldn't watch any more, and he started swimming back to the other three men. They also had witnessed the savage assault and saw Stessel disappear with the fin.

"Let's pray," Eversley said, still shivering from fright. The four formed a square in the ocean and began in unison, "The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want . . ."

Fifteen minutes later they saw the last of the K-74 as the sea slowly swallowed its remains. There were two violent explosions — apparently from depth charges which were still armed and probably torn from their racks when the gondola hit the water. "Let's hope the others were clear of her," Gidding said.

There were two more hours of the blazing tropical sun and the incessant electric shocklike stings of Portuguese jellyfish. At 10:15 a.m., the destroyer U.S.S. Dahlgren came into view and soon hauled the men aboard.

A half-dozen shots rang out as the Dahlgren crew lifted Eversley, the last man. "There were two shark fins right behind you," a sailor with a rifle informed Eversley.

Another great sigh of relief came over the four when they learned Rice, Schmidt, Kowalski, and Bourne were also aboard, having been picked up about three miles away. It wasn't until eight hours later that Lt. Grills, suffering from severe sunburn and submersion, was rescued by a seaplane. He had become separated from the others during the night and was trying to swim to shore—a good 25 miles away.

The Navy, not very proud of its highly touted submarine killer's first performance against a surfaced enemy sub, waited 11 days before issuing a communiqué on the unprecedented engagement. The communiqué only gave the barest details: "A nonrigid airship, U. S. K-74, was lost at sea recently as the result of a gunfire attack by a surfaced enemy submarine . . . One member of the crew was lost."

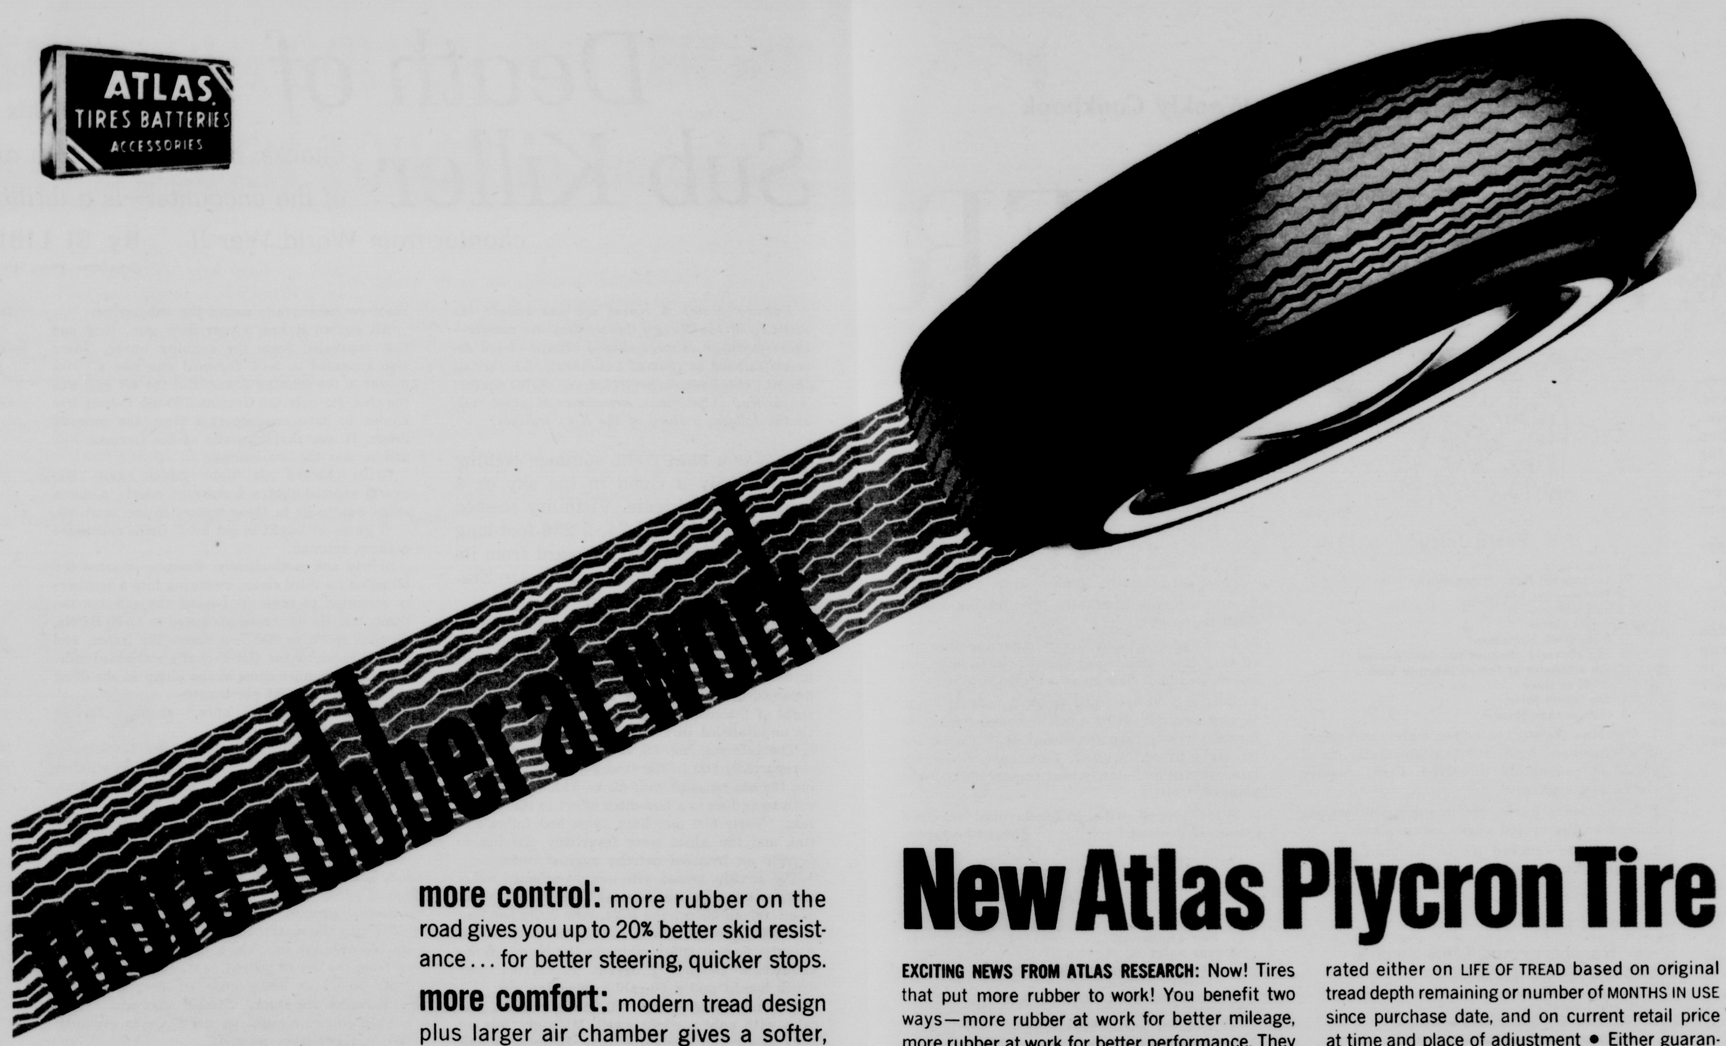

The 75-word statement went almost unnoticed in the nation's press. Then, nearly two decades later, retired Vice Adm. Charles E. Rosendahl, doing research for a history of the Navy's nonrigid airship program, uncovered this bizarre war adventure. Investigating further, he learned through West German sources that on July 19, 1943, German Naval Headquarters received a radio message from U-boat 134 that it had been attacked and damaged by an American airship off the Florida coast.

THE SUBMARINE dispatch indicated that the blimp's gunfire had caused some damage to the boat's main ballast tank.

The U-134's message also showed that bombs were dropped from the airship, contrary to the belief of Lieutenant Grills.

Admiral Rosendahl learned that the destruction of the K-74 was avenged on Aug. 24, 1943, when a British bomber caught up with the U-134 in the Bay of Biscay off France. The bomber crew reported that the submarine was surfaced, apparently damaged, and limping back to port when its bombs found their mark. The German Admiralty confirmed this two months later when it disclosed that U-134, last heard from on Aug. 24, was presumed lost along with its crew of 28 officers and men.

Details of this unparalleled blimp-sub engagement were not declassified until 1961, when the Secretary of the Navy awarded special letters of commendation to every member of the K-74 crew except Lieutenant Grills. The lieutenant, now a lawyer in Indianapolis, was presented the Navy's Distinguished Flying Cross "for courage, skill, and devotion to duty in the face of hostile gunfire . . . in keeping with highest traditions of the United States Navy."

CLIFF ROBERTSON:

The Man Who Portrays JFK

This underrated actor got his first job at seven and once lived for three months in a car; but he and the President have one thing in common—they're both seafaring men

By PEER J. OPPENHEIMER

PRESIDENT KENNEDY insisted on three conditions before he gave Warner Brothers the right to make a movie of "PT 109," the book about his naval exploits during World War II:

1. Any royalties accruing to him must go to the men of the original PT 109, or their families; 2. The actor who plays Kennedy must refrain from imitating him in any way; 3. The President must approve the actor who portrays him.

Among those considered for the prize role were some of Hollywood's most-in-demand actors, including Warren Beatty and Jeffrey Hunter. But the part finally went to Cliff Robertson—and it seems likely to bring him the recognition that has eluded him for so long.

"Even before the picture was released, there was great interest in me from all over the world," Cliff said. "Offers have been pouring in like mad."

The President's approval of Robertson obviously didn't hinge on any similarity in their childhoods. For all practical purposes, Cliff was an orphan. His mother died of a ruptured appendix when he was two. He is vague about his father's whereabouts thereafter, but apparently he rarely saw him.

Cliff was raised in La Jolla, Calif., by his grandmother. He went to work at seven, mowing lawns for 25¢ an hour. At nine, he got a job as door-to-door magazine salesman and within six months built up the largest circulation in the county.

At 12, Cliff switched to a still more profitable newspaper route, and a couple of years later he further increased his income by preserving appendixes at a clinic where his grandmother worked as a nurse.

But Cliff's next money-making scheme ended in disaster. He and a partner—both 16—invested their savings in a fishing skiff. They went out at 4 every morning to catch lobsters and got back just before school started. It proved profitable till they smashed their boat to bits on the rocky coast.

Nevertheless, Cliff's appetite for the sea was whetted, and he talked his buddy into driving to San Francisco the day after they graduated from high school to sign up as merchant seamen. He also talked his buddy's father out of his car, which was to provide more than transportation.

"We had counted on waiting a couple of days to find a ship. It took us three months," Cliff remembers. They used the sedan as their hotel room, washed and shaved in a nearby gasoline station, and ate food wherever they could get it.

When Cliff's pal was signed up before him, the car was taken back to La Jolla, and Cliff was deprived of his sleeping accommodations. "I spent the nights on the docks, spread out between crates," he recalls. Fortunately he was able to sign up on the freighter Admiral Cole the following week.

ONE SUNNY Sunday morning a few weeks later, the ship was in Philippine waters and Cliff was standing watch. He observed with interest a huge four-engine seaplane lumbering closer and closer. Soon it was almost directly overhead. To Cliff's surprise, the bomb bays opened and bombs hurtled toward the ship.

The date was Dec. 7, 1941.

"We didn't know that Pearl Harbor was being attacked simultaneously," Cliff said. "Our radioman was still in bed. On a small steamer, you don't always have 24-hour radio watch.

"The ship was hit and listing heavily as the plane came back again and again and strafed us with machine-gun fire.

Robertson, as Kennedy, encourages crewman (actor James McCallion) after PT 109 sinking.

"We had two lifeboats. All but three men jumped into one boat, which was lowered into the water. The captain was in the wheelhouse taking care of the log, and the carpenter and I were unsuccessfully trying to lower the second boat."

During the last strafing attack, Cliff saved the carpenter's life by shoving him to the deck just as the plane came over. Bullet holes marked the spot where the carpenter had stood seconds before.

"The rest of the crew returned to the ship when it appeared we would stay afloat after all. Fortunately, the Japanese bomber pilot didn't think so. He took off." The Admiral Cole went to New Zealand for a week of major repairs—and a chance for Cliff to jump ship. "I wanted to join the New Zealand Air Force," he told me.

"I hid in a cemetery on a hill overlooking Wellington for five days and lived on raw carrots. On the sixth day, I saw smoke rising from the funnel of the Admiral Cole and decided it was safe to leave my hide-out."

No sooner had he arrived in town than he was stopped by two plain-clothes men. "Is your name Robertson?" one asked.

"No, sir, it's Richardson," he answered.

But the man insisted, "You're seaman Robertson, all right."

"How did you know?" Cliff burst out.

"You forgot your accent, old boy."

Back aboard the Admiral Cole, Cliff faced a not-too-stern captain. As he recalls: "Because of the perilous journey to New Zealand, almost all the guys got drunk and went AWOL. Only two of us were able to work at all that first day."

The day after his ship finally pulled into San Francisco, Cliff walked up to his grandmother's house—and found a gold star on her door. His ship had been reported sunk with all hands lost, and Cliff had been named La Jolla's first victim of World War II!

Later, Robertson enrolled in the U.S. Maritime Service, rose to Lieutenant (j.g.), and became one of the few sailors whose ship went down—after VE Day. "We piled up on rocks off the coast of Sweden during a heavy storm," he recalled, "but no one was seriously hurt."

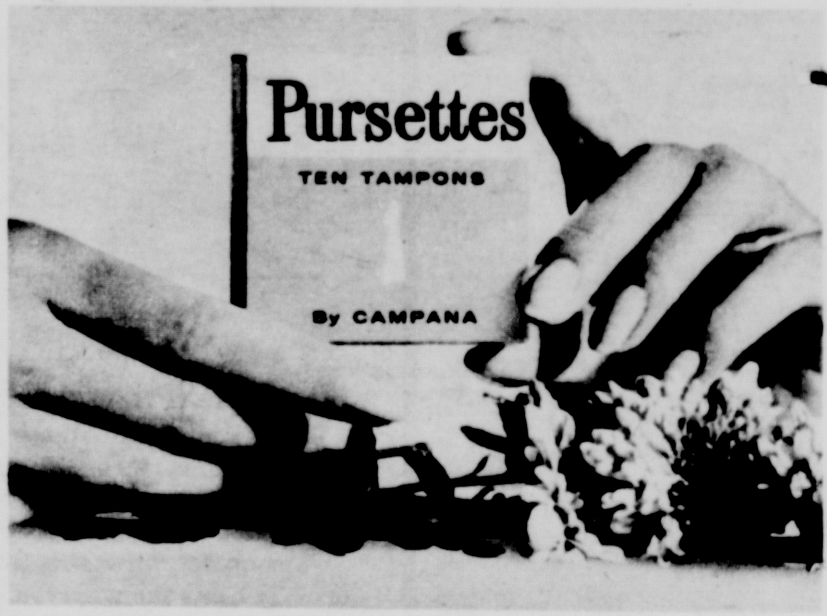

He continued his sea duty after the war as third officer aboard a freighter out of New York, while trying to get up enough nerve to make the theatrical rounds. "I had some summer-theater experience in high school, but that was all," he says.

CLIFF GOT HIS apprenticeship in the Catskill Mountain resorts at $5 a week, plus room and board. But his big breaks came on Broadway and through television. Unfortunately, the tv roles he created went to other actors when movies were made of them. Marlon Brando starred in the film version of "Orpheus Descending," Paul Newman in "The Hustler," Anthony Franciosa in "Career," and Jack Lemmon in "Days of Wine and Roses."

But Cliff is convinced that "PT 109" will be a turning point in his career—and he hopes it will be a turning point in his private life as well. Although there's no one "special" right now, he wants to get married again and have more children.

Cliff was divorced in 1959 from Cynthia Stone after two years of marriage. They had one daughter, Stephanie.

"I've always longed for family life, probably because I didn't have the benefit of a mother or father," Cliff told me. Then he added philosophically, "I would like to use my childhood as an excuse for things I did wrong, but in all honesty I can't. It wasn't that bad. In fact, life has been pretty good to me all along—and it promises to be even better!"

New Tiny Tampon Gives Super Protection

Free carrying case holds 4 of these tiny, new super absorbent tampons! That's right! In the attractive plastic purse container, shown below, you can conveniently carry an extra supply of Pursettes® tampons wherever you go.

Surprised at the small size of Pursettes? There's good reason for it! It's compressed a unique way. Though no larger than a lipstick, this slender tampon contains over two hundred thousand highly absorptive, gossamer fibers. Upon contact with moisture, new Pursettes blossom out to absorb more fully, more effectively.

Pursettes actually proved more absorbent than super sizes of other leading tampons in an independent laboratory test.

Only one size is necessary to provide this super absorbency. No need to bother trying different absorbencies, as with other tampons, to find out which is right for you.

And that's not all! Each hygienically sealed tampon has an exclusive tapered, prelubricated tip that does away with the bulky applicator (and its attendant disposal problem)...does away with hard cardboard edges... makes insertion easy, gentle, medically correct. Another comfort. This tampon never shreds. A soft, sheer covering takes care of that.

If you've not tried Pursettes yet, please do for a wonderful new experience in internal sanitary protection.

The permanent, inconspicuous Pursettes case (about the size of a cigarette lighter) keeps your secret safe...lets you carry a supply neatly and discreetly in your purse. Send for your purse case containing 4 Pursettes now.

I was just thinking...

ANY HUSBAND who ever took a trip knows he'll never get there on time.

In addition to all the stops for gasoline, ice-cream cones, and wrong turns resulting from navigational errors, he also will be forced to a halt at roadside souvenir stands and sit in the hot sun while the little woman trots eagerly among the birdbaths and baskets.

It beats me why you can buy all kinds of blankets made by the Navajos in New Mexico at all the stands in Minnesota and why the side-road Seminoles in Florida feature beaded belts made by the Indians in Minnesota.

The Italians turn out beautiful little figurines of Scottish Highlanders, and Paris perfume is a best seller in the British West Indies. In Paris you buy Highland heather.

So I suppose it's natural that almost any American souvenir shop features native art which was actually made by the head-hunters of Kenya. You know the usual assortment. There are hand-tooled leather bags, plaster peasants leading donkeys, little brown jugs labeled "Welcome to Bide-A-Wee," and genuine synthetic earrings that reach your shins.

But the shops are irresistible all the same. I clamber out at every "antique" shop to fondle the imitation cranberry glass ($47.50 at half price) or wander through the Side o' Shore Shop mooning over goatskin laundry bags. This has caused the rest of my family to miss the last ferryboat to the mainland, the last units at the motel, and the last chance at dinner before the cover charge.

On my latest expedition I found a quaint little mountain hideaway which dealt in primitive art. All its creations were the products of hillbilly artisans, weaving and carving by the light of the moon and turning out delicate specimens of bird cages and wastebaskets between stints at the still. Or so I was told.

I couldn't decide whether to buy the lopsided hamper, so rustic for the bathroom, or the wicker serving tray for those casual evenings by the pool I don't have. Finally, I decided on a reed basket, a real conversation piece to impress the stay-at-homes.

Only after I was back being one myself did I find the label inside.

It read: Made in Hong Kong.

Friends of the Bride

Glad clamor ascends from her feminine friends
When they learn that her troth has been plighted.
How blithely they trill at each party and shower
Over trousseau and linens and other lush dower—
They are, to a lady, delighted!

What rapturous screams at the honeymoon schemes;
What prospects of heaven each spies out
On meeting the bridegroom. So then comes the Day:
They go to the wedding, befurbished and gay,
And promptly start crying their eyes out!

Quips and Quotes

A young couple who were ardent dog fanciers always had two or three canines in their home. When the couple's first baby came along, friends wondered how the infant would get along with all the pets.

When the baby was about a year old, a friend hesitantly broached the subject. "Er, about the baby," he asked, "how is he doing—talking yet?"

"Not yet," the father replied proudly, "but you should hear him bark!"

No matter what the architect suggested, the prospective home builder found that it "wasn't quite right."

"Can't you give me some idea of the style home you want?" the architect asked. "Ranch, colonial, split-level . . ."

"All I know," replied the client, "is that it must match the doorknob my wife bought at an antique shop."

—Herm Albright

The young bride had just had her first argument with her husband and ran crying to her eldest sister. "We always disagree," she sobbed. "What should I do?"

"I don't really know," the sister said thoughtfully. "My John and I both like the same things—it just took him 12 years to learn." —James Shurluck
